SENATE TO ACT ON PENROSE CONFESSION

FIND FOUR CHILDREN STARVING

The discovery of four emaciated children—one of them a six-year-old girl, weighing but twenty pounds—in a cottage in Bridgewater, which has come to be known as the "House of Mystery" among the townspeople, brought to light today one of the most shocking stories of alleged parental neglect which the Boston agents of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children say they have ever had brought to their attention.

The parents of the children are Mr. and Mrs. Luther Watkins of Bridgewater. According to the S. P. C. C. agents, Watkins fled immediately after their visit to the house with the Bridgewater police and has not yet been seen since. Watkins was the leader in a religious cult.

Captive for Years.

The children, according to the S. P. C. C. authorities, had been practically imprisoned in the "House of Mystery" for several years. For the past three years the society's agents have been making efforts to secure evidence which would warrant entering the house and summoning the parents into court.

The Bridgewater police have summoned the mother, Mrs. Watkins to appear in the Brockton police court next Monday. A search is being made to locate the missing husband.

The children were literally rescued from starvation, according to the S. P. C. C. officials. The four children were Roger, twelve, Marian, eight, Gertrude, six, and Louise eight months.

Pale as White Paper.

The S. P. C. C. agents described the little ones as being so pale they had the color of white paper. Their bodies were pathetically thin.

The agents of the Children's Society told today of the smuggling of food to Roger Watkins. The boy appeared regularly at an upper window and let down a string to which a basket of food was then attached.

After several weeks the boy was detected drawing up the basket, and the window was then nailed up.

Neighbors reported their observations to the Bridgewater police. Agents of the S. P. C. C. had been making their own investigation, and went to the police for a warrant.

Taken to State Farm.

The Bridgewater selectmen with a policeman and an agent of the society went to the Watkins house. When they appeared, Watkins is said to have escaped.

The three older children were taken to the State Farm. The infant was left in charge of the mother at the Watkins home. The parents are accused of neglect and cruelty.

Bridgewater people told the S. P. C. C. authorities that Watkins had spoken of writing for electrical magazines and medical journals.

"DARN SOCKS" SONG OF SUFFRAGETTES

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 22.—In order to dissipate the impression that women who yearn to vote do not know the first elements of housekeeping, Minnesota suffragists will maintain a booth at the State Fair, where every man, whether married or single, may have his hose darned. The following war cry has also been adopted:

Darn the government, darn the socks,
That's the way to ballot box.
Patch the holes in ballot's hose,
Mend to the polls and vote our woes.

MAYOR ASKS INQUIRY ON COAL FAVORITISM

The Chamber of Commerce was today requested by Mayor Fitzgerald to investigate the charges made by the New England Coal Dealers' Association to the effect that Boston was being discriminated against in the matter of forwarding coal. The Mayor also called the matter to the attention of the three Boston Congressmen, urging them to investigate, and if the facts warranted it to demand action by the federal authorities.

Battle of Plates Fought in South End Restaurant

The South End's biggest battle of the plates was fought during the noon hour today, with the diners in the restaurant at No. 1478 Washington street, as spectators. When it was over the owner was under arrest and the chef was in an ambulance on his way to City Hospital.

The war began in the midst of the mid-day meal. Mrs. Lesbokles Legias, wife of the owner, was waiting on table. The chef, Peter Duboias, was in the kitchen busting out the orders. Legias was in front at the cash register.

Mrs. Legias in the rush, began calling out from the centre of the floor the dishes ordered, not taking the time to go over to the "slide." This made the cook angry.

"Say, don't you yell at me from over there," he cried. "Don't you know the proper way for waitresses to do is to walk over here and say 'stew' more politely to me?"

An appeal was made to Legias. He decided in favor of the waitress. Wasn't she his wife?

Legias says Duboias threw the first plate. Anyway, the duel of dishes began. Back and forth from kitchen to restaurant flew the crockery.

One plate shied at Duboias by Legias hit, and the cook took the count. He was taken to the City Hospital with cuts about his head.

WOMAN TRIES TO DIE IN CHARLES

Hannah F. Neathy, thirty-four years old, attempted to drown herself in the Charles River today, following her arraignment in the Cambridge District Court. She was rescued by Frank J. Terrill.

Terrill, who was standing nearby when the Neathy girl rushed past and jumped into the river, plunged in after her and got her ashore. He lives on Lawrence street, Medford, and is employed as a mechanic at the Bennett street car barns of the Boston Elevated.

Miss Neathy was walking with her sister, when she suddenly rushed for the river. The sister guessed her shooting to passersby to stop her. Miss Neathy reached the river bank and, pulling off her hat, jumped in. She shouted for help, and began to struggle. Terrill reached her soon. Miss Neathy, who lives at No. 2 Lamson place, Cambridge, was in court with her sister, Mrs. E. Neathy, on the charge of disturbing the peace. Ruby O'Rourke, another woman, was arrested with them in Lamson place on the evening of August 13. The O'Rourke woman was charged with assault and battery on the sisters.

When the cases were called one of the witnesses, a woman, fainted when walking to the witness stand. The cases were continued to October 2, the defendants being allowed to go on their own recognizance.

CLERK BURNED BY EXPLOSION

Explosion and fire today in the drug store of Sawyer & Company, Hollis and Fremont streets, caused damage of $3,000. The police say that a clerk was carrying a lighted candle while handling denatured alcohol in the cellar, caused the explosion.

Several heard an explosion from the cellar, and George Lassi, a clerk, ran up into the store with his coat on fire.

An alarm was given from Box 61 and engines 3, 26 and 27 played five streams into the cellar, as the explosion had set fire to the woodwork.

The store was damaged by water and smoke, while the tenants on the second floor—Walter J. Rand, dentist; Miss H. F. Dailey, dentist; Samuel E. Daggett, Mrs. E. H. Bishop, real estate; William O. Warkius and C. H. Whittemore, opticians—had their rooms hurt by smoke.

MANAGUA AMERICANS IN DANGER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—More than 200 Americans, alarmed at the excesses of the victory-mad revolutionists, are crowded into the United States legation at Managua, Nicaragua, according to dispatches to the State Department today from Minister Weitzel.

Twenty-five American women and children have been taken aboard the cruiser Tuttin and the gunboat Annapolis at Corinto, and every available man from the vessels has been landed to protect foreign property in Nicaragua.

Minister Weitzel also confirmed the press report of the slaughter of 500 federal soldiers in Leon by the victorious rebels, who captured General Mena.

General Buron, the federal leader, was murdered in cold blood and two of his men, said to be Americans, Harvey Dodd and Phillips, were killed while taking refuge in a hospital.

Great Loss of Life.

Fighting lasted all day and great loss of life is reported. The American minister reports that the situation is growing steadily worse and asks that more troops be sent to Nicaragua at once. He had evidently not received word of the small army of sailors and marines who will be enroute to Corinto by Saturday night.

General Johnston at Corinto informed the State department today that rebels have captured a number of loans between Leon and Chinandega, among which are located a large plantation and the Nicaraguan Central distillery, containing five million pesetas worth of alcohol.

The transport Prairie left Portsmouth, N. H., last night, for Philadelphia, where she will take aboard 750 marines on Saturday, sailing immediately for Panama. The cruiser California leaves San Francisco today, carrying 600 sailors and sixty marines. She will go directly to Corinto, landing a force there if necessary.

Navy Yard to Send Marines.

Two companies of marines are to be rushed from the Charlestown Navy Yard to the scene of trouble in Nicaragua.

Orders were received early today from the Navy Department by Lieutenant-Colonel Theodore Porter Kane to prepare the two companies for an expeditionary force within twenty-four hours.

The marines, one hundred and fifty men, all trained veterans and just returned from Cuba, will leave the South Station at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon for New York. They will embark from New York on the transport Prairie.

At the South Station they will be joined by two companies of marines from the Portsmouth Navy Yard. Lieutenants Stone and Martin will command the Boston companies. Both companies are being fitted out today with full equipment for active field duty.

JERSEY RUNAWAYS FOUND IN CAMBRIDGE

After wandering for eleven days from their home at Bayonne, N. J., Frances M. Cowin, thirteen, and her twelve-year-old brother John, were taken by the Cambridge police today. The children had spent three nights sleeping on a roof and two nights on a schooner tied up at an East Cambridge wharf. The pair left home with $5, according to their story. They went to New York by train, came to Fall River by boat and to Boston by trolley. They once lived in Cambridge, so they managed to find their way to East Cambridge. Three nights they slept on the roof at No. 192 Cambridge street. They were turned over to the State Board of Charities and their parents notified.

Constantino Sued for $100,000 Girl Charges Promise to Wed French Beauty Asks Damages

Miss Hontabat Introduced to Singer in Boston Last Winter.

Opera lovers in Boston learned today with the greatest surprise that Florencio Constantino, the famous first tenor of the Boston Opera House, who has thrilled thousands by his dramatic and ardent appealing love-making in the operas, has been sued for $100,000 for alleged breach of promise by Miss Marcelle Hontabat, a beautiful young French girl, who is said to have been introduced to the singer in Boston last Winter.

According to Back Bay acquaintances of Miss Hontabat, who was also known as Marie, the young widow became acquainted with Constantino during the opera season. She was in Boston a great deal during the Winter, it was stated today, but it was declared that no one had been told of any sentiment closer than friendship existing between the great tenor and the young woman.

Miss Hontabat was described today as being twenty years old, with black hair, dark eyes and rosy cheeks. It was said that formerly she had been employed as a governess.

Stirs Boston Society.

The news of the breach of promise suit has stirred Boston Society circles, by which Constantino has been feted again and again. The tenor has always been regarded as Boston's own opera star, and the rival of Caruso. Constantino has been with the Boston Opera House since it was first established, and has been its first tenor.

The public has been keenly interested in Constantino's doings, and the singer has been held in the highest regard. He lived in the Back Bay and was the guest of honor at numerous receptions. Because of his talent and prominence he was much sought after by society. But suddenly he preferred to keep out of the limelight, and lived quietly with his two sons.

On His Way South.

Constantino sailed from New York for Buenos Aires, Tuesday on the Lamport & Holt liner Vasari, taking with him the orchestra chairs and draperies for the boxes, and new drop curtains for his new theatre at Ringardo, three hours from Buenos Aires. This is the city where he worked for eight years as a mechanical engineer before his voice was discovered.

Miss Hontabat's lawyer, Max Schenkman, who has offices at No. 68 William street, New York, would not disclose her address or the details of the suit, but he said that they would all be brought out in the complaint, which would be filed in court in New York, next week. He said that Constantino had been served with the summons in the case on July 23 at the Hotel Victoria. When the tenor went away, Tuesday, he said:

Returns in November.

"I shall sing six performances free for charity in my new theatre, and after seeing that it is running smoothly I shall sail back to New York, arriving in November, and after a few concerts I will depart for Mexico."

The new theatre is not to be reserved for opera entirely, but will be devoted in turn to drama and comedy. It is now the off season in Buenos Aires, and Constantino has engaged some of the singers resident there to open his theatre with "Rigoletto" in September.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—With the legislative appropriation bill ready for its third journey to the White House, prospects for adjournment are brighter today. C. S. DENNISON IS DEAD AT 54

Charles Sumner Dennison, president and treasurer of the Dennison Manufacturing Company, died today at West Falmouth after an illness of three weeks.

He was born in Newton fifty-four years ago and came from Revolutionary stock. He was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He then became connected with the Dennison Manufacturing Company and took the position of salesman in the New York office. After this, his keen business ability brought him forward, and in 1893 he was made a director of the company. The wide popularity of the company came about through his untiring interest to promote the enterprises, which have made it prominent in Boston business circles.

In 1885 he married Miss Rosabel French of Jamaica Plain. He has two daughters, Miss Lydia Dennison, who married Frank L. Nagle, a grandson of the late General Nagle of Pennsylvania, and Miss Olivia, who married Jack Boumphrey of Monkstown, Ireland.

ADMITS TAKING CASH FROM STANDARD OIL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Sensational investigation is bound to follow the amazing admissions by Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania that he did receive a certificate of deposit for $25,000 from John D. Archbold, financial agent of the Standard Oil Company, in 1904.

READS CIPHER MESSAGE FROM ARCHBOLD.

Senator Penrose declared that this $25,000 was only a part of $125,000 given to the Republican National campaign fund by the Standard Oil Company. He said the $25,000 given to him was simply Pennsylvania's share. He boldly declared Colonel Roosevelt got the benefit of the rest.

If the Senate decides to investigate the charges, Colonel Roosevelt will appear as a voluntary witness.

While the colonel has not authorized any official statement, he has told friends he is ready to assist the Senate in every way possible to probe the scandal.

More amazing, however, than the financial explanation of the Pennsylvania Senator, was his ready reading of a cipher telegram which he said he received in June, 1904, from Archbold.

And even more audacious, to the stunned circle of fellow-Senators, was Penrose's facile translation of the same cipher message.

This was real cipher, the Archbold telegram, a meaningless hodge-podge of words, smacking of mystery and secrecy and conspiracy.

Penrose read the cipher, then read the translation as deftly as though examining ciphers from the Standard Oil paymaster was part of his daily work.

An Amazing Spectacle.

The spectacle of a United States Senator showing such easy familiarity with political underworkings was more than even the most expectant had bargained for when Penrose began his speech.

Senator Penrose's speech was his own carefully prepared defence to charges

FREE MAN WHO BEAT COUPLE FOR CRUELTY

"I love my horses almost as much as I do my children. I love them so well that no man can beat them when I am around. Monroe drives a coal team for the Batchelder Coal Company. Monroe jumped from his seat and gave both men a severe beating. He was arrested. The strangers escaped.

POLITICAL NOTES

Governor Foss is having his first try out on the stump in Vermont. Considering that Vermont is his native State, this is something unusual. When the Governor was endeavoring to go to Congress as a Republican, Vermont didn't need him. The G. O. P. majority there was safe. Now there is a chance for a wide open split between Taft and Roosevelt, and Governor Foss is helping the cause along for Wilson.

Tonight the Governor winds up his Vermont tour with a rally at Bellows Falls. He is due at his desk in the State House early Friday. Reports from his tour express his delight with the receptions given him and for the prospects of the election for Governor in Vermont being thrown into the Legislature. Vermont requires a majority to elect.

Mayor Fitzgerald and the Wilson-Foss organizers ran plump into District Attorney Pelletier at a meeting of Worcester Democrats yesterday. They listened with smiles while Pelletier advanced his cause for the Democratic nomination. Then they proceeded themselves to get busy.

David I. Walsh and ex-Councillor Edward P. Barry will make things lively upon the stump for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant-Governor. Both are able campaign speakers, and both have warm friends all over the State.

The district attorney has cut quite a program for himself between now and the primaries. Today he spoke at Chelsea at the Veteran Firemen's Muster and tonight meets Lawrence Democrats. He plans to speak every day and evening now until the primaries.

Colonel Roosevelt plans to spend three days in Vermont, August 29, 30 and 31. He may not speak in Maine until after the State election. Maine chooses its State officers on September 9, a week after Vermont. Maine's election will vie with Vermont's in national interest as an index of what might come in November.

Speaker Champ Clark will be on the stump in Maine the latter part of next week, and may attend the wigwam of Democrats at Canobie Lake Saturday, August 31. This gathering, at which 1,000 are expected, will open the Democratic State campaign. Governor Marshall of Indiana, nominee for Vice-President, will attend.

United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge makes his bow today before Essex Republicans at Ferncroft as a spellbinder for the presidential campaign. Friend and admirer though he is of Colonel Roosevelt's, it's the G. O. P., without any new-fangled notions, for the statesman of Nahant. Today's appearance of the Senator on the stump will be his first since the year 1900, a season of party policy, he was "crammed" last year as a campaign orator.

It will be tomorrow before the Secretary of State can get the full list of all candidates for State nominations. Massachusetts never before had so many patriots willing for public office. The primary ballot for September 24 promises to be complicated and clumsy.

Either Charles S. Bird of Walpole or ex-Mayor Edward A. Fleming of Fitchburg will be the Bull Moose candidate for Governor. A postal card poll now being taken of announced Progressives will determine whether it shall be Bird or Fosdick.

Ex-Speaker Joseph Walker and Colonel Everett C. Benton will have it out with each other again from the same stump here Saturday. They speak at the outing of Everett Republicans at Bass Point. The contest between them for the Republican nomination is beginning to be lively.

$300 TO $125 WAGER THAT WILSON WINS

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—While offers of wagers at 3 to 1 that Governor Wilson will win were heard of in the financial districts, it could not be learned that any actual money had been placed at those odds tonight. One bet was made for $300 to $125 on Mr. Wilson. One of the anomalies is that while the odds are 3 to 1 in favor of Taft Republicans who will lend 4 to 1 that the third term candidate will not win, there are plenty of Bull Moose men who are willing to wager that President Taft will run third in the race.

CHAPTER V

The New Filene Store

Our Third Fundamental: Right Relations With Our Store Organization

WE PROCEED on the principle that as we treat our buying, selling and office staffs, so our customers will be treated. And we hold right public serving as second to no other function of this business.

Happy co-operation of all members of our organization—a business democracy in which the youngest employe participates.

Therein is the motive power responsible in great measure for our moving forward.

Just what does this mean?

First, liberal remuneration.

Second, sharing of profits.

Third, an actual and vital voice in store management.

Fourth, every aid looking toward increased efficiency.

Fifth, enlargement of social and educational opportunities.

Sixth, right working conditions.

No visit to the new store will be complete unless it includes a view of Filene Co-operative Association quarters, occupying more than a third of the eighth floor, overlooking Washington street.

Here are provided a large dining room, kitchen, assembly rooms, committee room, library, smoking room, business office.

A cheerful and spacious hospital, for use of employes, contains separate wards for men and women, physician's office, nurse's quarters, waiting rooms and baths.

All of these institutions are under the direct control of the Filene Co-operative Association, whose membership includes all employes and everyone connected with the management.

Food supplies brought into the employes' kitchen are purchased through their association.

We think the public will agree with us in pronouncing this an ideal business home for a store staff.

As to the Filene Co-operative Association, its functions are quite unusual.

For example, its members may by a two-thirds vote amend or cancel any store rule; this vote is subject to veto of the management, but if again taken up by the employes and passed by a two-thirds vote it must be accepted.

Misunderstandings or disputes in regard to dismissal, salary regulation or promotion may be appealed to an arbitration board whose decision is final, the management reserving no power of veto.

A Filene Co-operative Association bureau provides for savings accounts and pays interest on deposits. Loans may be arranged. There is an insurance organization providing sick and death benefits.

Committees afford opportunities for strangers on the staff to become acquainted. Aiding in this are a young men's club, a young women's club and a girls' club.

The house co-operates with several outside schools for training in salesmanship and commercial knowledge. Within the store are classes for employes.

A suggestion system provides rewards up to $25.00 for ideas.

The association issues a weekly newspaper called "The Echo."

The whole story of what our staffs have done toward self-help and store-betterment would fill this page and then bubble over the edges with good tidings.

But come in!

You'll see the sunshine of it reflected from a host of happy faces.

Gowns at Newport Set American Record for Cost and Taste

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—Of course one must not wear the same costume twice at the tennis tournament, and so the display of gowns at the Casino was even more varied and splendid than on the previous day.

The vagaries of the fashion were not, perhaps, so evident, but the general richness and artistic quality of the dresses were far more impressive, and the ensemble of tasteful finery surpassed, in effect, that of any outdoor social gathering ever before held in America.

Mrs. Norman Whitehouse's dress was preceded with large and variously shaped figures that made it resemble an astrologer's robe. Mrs. Ogden Goelet wore white.

Others whose costumes won the greatest admiration were:

Mrs. A. C. Moreland, brown chiffon, large hat encircled in yellow and pink roses.

Miss Esther Moreland, embroidered white linen gown with collar, cuffs and belt and underskirt in delft blue.

Mrs. Craig Biddle, embroidered cream net gown, with belt of ermine, in lingerie hat.

Mrs. William G. Loew, combination of white satin with an overdress of mustard colored chiffon. Hat laden with buttercups.

Miss Roberta Villars, cutaway blue linen suit with Rolesphere collar.

Miss Margaret Stewart, pink chiffon panier costume with a large drooping hat.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., black charmeuse, with black velvet tam o'shanter.

Strength to Resist Boiling Sun and Wintry Blasts

MRS. H. R. KING, 60 Years Old.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has done me a world of good and has enabled me to stand my work in the boiling hot sun all summer. I am past sixty, yet have superintended my men all this summer and never lost a day only when it stormed too hard for them to come out. I am sure I could not have done so had it not been for the strength Duffy's gave me. I never feel a day the past two winters that a man could possibly work in the open.

Harry R. King, Brunswick, Md.

RUTH MORRILL, BACK BAY GIRL WHO HAS DISAPPEARED

RUTH MORRILL

The police today joined in the search for Ruth Morrill, thirteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. C. Morrill of No. 12 Follen street, Back Bay, who disappeared Monday last, leaving on her mother's bureau a note saying she planned to kill herself. The pathetic note read as follows:

Dear Mother—I am leaving this world forever. I am going to kill myself. I displeased you and could not bear to live and see you displeased. If you want to know the reason why go to the Deaconess Home. Love for darling Dick and you. RUTH.

Do not waste money for police, for I will be dead. Millions of kisses.

Mrs. Morrill does not believe the child has really killed herself. Ruth had been sent away from the Deaconess Home Hospital in Haverhill, to which she had gone for vacation, and had been threatened with the law, because of a few berries picked in another's pasture and a forbidden visit to a candy store.

Somewhere, Mrs. Morrill thinks, the girl is waiting, in abject terror, afraid to come home afraid to suffer at the minions of the law should pounce upon her for her deeds, which her childish conscience has magnified into something appalling.

Mrs. Morrill last saw her daughter August 6, for on that day the girl went with her brother, Richard, six years old, for a two weeks' vacation at the Deaconess Fresh Air Home in Haverhill. Mrs. Morrill is the daughter of a Methodist clergyman. They were members of the First Methodist church of Boston, and mother and daughter were frequent visitors at the Deaconess Home on Massachusetts avenue.

Mrs. McLean Sets Hoodoo Gem Fad.

Sensible and beautiful belle of Bar Harbor broke the "hoodoo" on the blue Hope diamond and set the fashion in jewels with history.

MRS. JOHNSON ANSWERS ELIOT

Miss Addams' seconding of Colonel Roosevelt's nomination was spectacular, but is very bad taste.

I have no patience with these spectacular efforts to advance women's rights. Woman's greatest right is to love and serve. There is too much demagogism abroad. Too many are pursuing madly after a shadow.

Sharp passages from Dr. Eliot's discussion of Colonel Roosevelt.

Mrs. Lewis J. Johnson, one of the Massachusetts delegates at large to the Progressive Party convention at Chicago today, replied to the statement of President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard, in which he is quoted as saying that the seconding of Colonel Roosevelt's nomination by Miss Jane Addams was spectacular and in bad taste.

Mrs. Johnson, who is the wife of Professor Johnson of Harvard, says she does not believe that Dr. Eliot really ever said such a thing. She thinks he is "too progressive for such insanity as that."

"He is right in saying that woman is to be loved and that she is to serve," Mrs. Johnson said.

"I think that Dr. Eliot is too wise a man to allow himself to be misquoted as wanting to curtail the future growth of woman. No man with any progressiveness in his nature and understanding what a woman is capable of doing, will in any degree limit woman's increasing usefulness.

"Speaking of Miss Jane Addams and her part in the Bull Moose convention, Dr. Eliot said:

"Women have no proper share in a political convention. Never before in our history as a Democratic nation have we gone so far as to permit a woman to nominate a candidate for the Presidency.

"Miss Addams received a great deal of popular applause when she seconded Mr. Roosevelt's nomination. It is a very spectacular proceeding, but it was in very bad taste. I also understand Colonel Roosevelt had the bad taste to publicly compliment her on her action and think her. That, too, was spectacular.

"Lately he seems to have been playing cards and I was surprised that he so unreservedly played the cards of the women's movement in his convention. I think he will repent doing so.

"I am just old-fashioned enough to condemn absolutely this movement among the women for such public participation. I have no patience with their spectacular efforts to advance women's rights. I believe women's greatest right is to be loved and to serve. I believe the highest and most normal type is content to be reserved, modest and to exert her influence largely the medium of her men folks.

"I think Jane Addams for what she has done at Hull House. She is doing a splendid work in her way. But I dislike to see her held up in the limelight as an example for all other women to follow. We need women to bear children and attend to their homes. The men ought to be able to regulate the labor problem to meet all needs without direct assistance from women.

Mr. Roosevelt is to be blamed for complicating the present political problem with added worries of his own problem. He used to be a fine fellow. One I thought a strong character and one of the public welfare and an unselfish worker.

"Saintly, however, he seems to have been slipping rapidly. He is unwise to meet adversity. There has been too much agitation and hysteria."

WILL WED HER OLD SCHOOLMATE

A romance that had its beginning in the old Lewis School, Roxbury, will lead to a pretty autumn ceremony when Miss Hazel F. Foster, daughter of Rupert D. Foster of No. 45 Bullard street, Dorchester, becomes the bride of Herbert V. Horne, an old Roxbury High athlete, at the bride's home. Rev. Clarence Vinson, of the Vine Memorial Congregational Church, will officiate.

Miss Foster is a daughter of Annapolis, N. S., will be bridesmaid. Elmer Leach will be best man.

Miss Foster and Herbert Horne were schoolmates at the Lewis School from the entering class to the graduating class. Then Miss Foster attended the Dorchester High School, from which she graduated, while Horne two years ago, while young Vaughn entered the Roxbury High, where he became well known as an athlete. He is now connected with a Boston optical house.

MARY GREEN GETS A JOB AT LAST

Finds Noon Employment for $3 a Week When Funds Have Shrunken To Thirty Cents.

Light begins to dawn for Mary Green. On her fourth day, with practically all her money gone, she secures a job as waitress and upon her return home finds a letter there from her little sister containing a $5 bill. The letter is filled with love and encouragement.

She writes the following letter in acknowledgment:

By MARY GREEN.

My own dear, generous, little sister: What a precious little gem you are! A true life-saver in disguise, for, dearie, I was nearer gone than you will ever know. I didn't write you yesterday, because I decided not to trouble you by writing all those miserable experiences, but rather to tell them to you some day when the fever to get out into the world is burning at its highest in you, and you come to tell me so. I told mother—that you must get out into the big world where everybody is doing such big things, and where fortune waits for all who have the courage to go after it.

It's then, dear, that I have decided to tell you all, and help you to decide that your own little world up there among the hills is but about as big a world as those who inhabit it choose to make it. And happiness! It may be here, but I have failed to see it, and I have also failed to find any one else who has seen much of it.

I started out this morning with hardly a hope left. A girl last night gave me a list of the restaurants in town and suggested that I go to each one and apply for a position as waitress. As blue and discouraged as I was, I had to smile at the idea of my being a waitress and guess that's about the first and only smile I've indulged in since I've been here. That was the last thought that entered my head when I started out from home, but I guess my ideals ran too high.

It was fearfully I went, too, for the same girl who told me to go and gave me the list also told me of some of the hardships with which I would have to contend. Of those I will tell you later just to give you an idea of what some other girls in the world, besides my poor, unhappy self, have to contend with.

Tells Another's Experience.

She arrived on a rainy evening and was drenched to the skin.

She walked down Washington street and saw a restaurant with the sign out, "Waitress Wanted." She went in, secured the position and reported to work the following morning. She stayed there but a short time when she secured another position on Tremont street.

She told me that as a rule in these restaurants, the up-town ones, a girl's life is made miserable by the persistent attention of the managers. "Some girls accept these attentions, others don't. The girl who is a favorite is first made cashier, then, so far as the other girls know, 'story ends,' she tells me.

"When I was in the restaurant on Tremont street I worked until 12 o'clock at night. It's this night work that is the first stumbling stone of the average girl, the girl who is lonely and who is susceptible to flattery. I was young, my cheeks like two red roses and a love of life still fresh in my heart.

"These fellows flattered me. They told me I was so pretty and all that. They would fight nights as to who each one would come home with me. My head was completely turned. It was mostly my favorite who came and almost every night we would sit on the door steps until 3 o'clock in the morning. She told about him on my eyes, not great, large hazel ones but big almost black. She sighed and said: 'Whatever saved me is more than I know.'

"I finally got into a restaurant down town. There are outdoor and indoor girls in all these places. They may start in right, but if a girl is at all pretty she has a hard row to hoe. I have worked side by side with them all along the line. I have seen them tempted and have seen them rise above it all. But the task is a hard one.

"First of all the girl gradually drifts into an intimate way of talking with the men. She waits upon the same ones day after day. She gets to know them, gets so she remembers their likes and dislikes. They commence calling 'pet-name.' Soon some man will tell her that she is too pretty to be working so hard. 'You're lonesome, aren't you, kid? Come on out with me tonight and we'll forget all about it. We'll have a dinner and a cocktail to brace you up, and we'll go to a show.'

"A girl came to work in a restaurant with me. She was fifteen and remarkably pretty. The men used to follow her from table to table. I kept an eye on her and tried at every turn to advise her. They flattered her and sympathized with her. Told her she was too sweet and pretty to be waiting on table. A woman, whose husband had left her, came to wait on table at the same place. She was twenty-two.

"She became friendly with the girl. She invited her out and around with her. Other men were always in the party. The girl was carried away by their attentions. She finally went like so many others. Only this case was different. She later met and fell in love with one of the best fellows the world can produce. He was the right fellow. He braced her up. He made her promise that never would she take a drink with any other fellow than himself. She is still a waitress but living one of the cleanest and finest lives a girl can live. A bad man was her ruination and it doesn't fall to the lot of every girl to meet the sort of man who wants to save her.

"She was one of the few girls I have known who turned back. And I would stake all I own that that man was a SURE one.

"In many of the cheap places, if the girl refuses the attentions of the managers she loses her job. A poor girl with nothing but that to be-tween her and starvation sees no way out, but the one so deftly pointed out to her.

Finds Work at Last.

"I know girls, fine, decent, modest girls who are forced to listen to the things some of the men they wait upon say to them, and at which every fibre of their being rebels. But what can they do? These men are patrons of the restaurant. They are only the waitresses. There is nothing to do but to ignore the remarks.

"If in each restaurant there were some person to whom a girl might report these men, and who would then forbid them coming to the restaurant—that would be the greatest life-saver the city of Boston could have. I have told you this—all of this—because you may get a position and I want every girl who starts in that line of work to start in with her eyes wide open.

She gave me the list of places to apply at and a sweet, womanly smile, as this morning I started out. This is the strange part of it, dear. The first place I went I got a position. It is in one of the large department stores here. I found the place after considerable wandering around. I went there and asked where the restaurant was. I was told that it was on the fourth floor. So I went up and asked where I could see about getting a position as waitress.

I was told that Miss —— would talk to me. She came into the room, and when I told her I was seeking employment she told me that they did need a new waitress, that my hours-perhaps would be no drawback, and that they would pay me three dollars a week; the hours, from 11 o'clock until 3, and I'm to start in tomorrow. I will then try and find employment for my spare time, but the first thing I must find a cheaper room. Had it not been for your five dollars I would have no money to live on till the end of my week, when I receive my pay—so you see what a dear little sister I have. Now you won't have to worry any more, dear, but just keep on loving me. Will drop mother a note later.

I am the happiest I have been since leaving you. I just know now that everything will come out all right, and you see there is no need of your worrying about me. That is where I want to think that you may be suffering, too.

Words of love from your devoted sister,

MARY.

Booth's Son Thanks President Says Taft Cable Touched Him

GEN. WILLIAM BOOTH AND AUTOGRAPH

This autograph and picture of General Booth were presented to Major Mary J. Shepard, leader of the Salvation Army in this city, when she visited him in London in 1911. General Booth then could hardly see. He made his hand direct the pen as best he could, as he was going into the vale of darkness just before his operation.

Commander Eva Booth Sails in Endeavor to Reach London for the Funeral.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—President Taft today received the following telegram from Bramwell Booth, son of General Booth, in response to the President's tribute to the genius of the father of the Salvation Army:

Mr. President—Your noble and eloquent tribute to our dear father's life and character touches me most deeply and will profoundly gratify our people and friends throughout the world. From the midst of my great sorrow, I thank you, both for them and myself. We mourn our great leader's loss, but by God's grace we go forward with his work. One of his precious possessions was the friendship and sympathy of so many American citizens. I humbly pray God to bless you and to crown your great nation with his loving kindness.

(Signed) BRAMWELL BOOTH.

Broken in health at the result of the death of her distinguished father, Commander Eva Booth today discarded the advice of physicians and sailed on the steamer Provence from New York in an attempt to reach London in time to attend her father's funeral next Thursday.

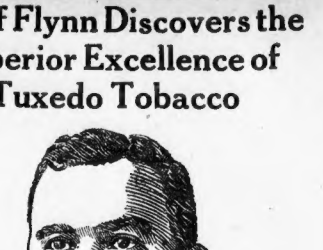
Chief Flynn Discovers the Superior Excellence of Tuxedo Tobacco



WILLIAM J. FLYNN, Famous Detective

Chief, Eastern Division United States Secret Service

"My tobacco trails have led me to but one satisfactory conclusion—that's Tuxedo"

—says the World Famous Sleuth.

"Talk about following false trails! The discovery of Tuxedo I made the more over more ground, and caused more experiments, than the landing of the Lupo gang." Thus spoke "Big Bill" Flynn, chief of the Eastern and most important Division of the United States Secret Service, as he sat in his office, meditatively complating a pipe of tobacco. Big, broad-shouldered, a wholesome, strong bulk of a man, he was every antithesis of what the legendary Sherlock Holmes should be. His face—broad, kindly—beamed with geniality. His eyes, lighting with a friendly greeting, were nevertheless shrewd, magnetic, all-penetrating.

"Before I found Tuxedo I smoked various brands. One took me over more ground, and bacco bit my tongue. Others were too strong. I smoked raw tobaccos and seemed tobaccos. Finally, I bought a can of Tuxedo.

"It's been with me since—my chief little assistant, as it were. When I'm confronted by an especially obscure and difficult plot, I sit down, think and smoke. Somehow a pipe helps in concentration. Tuxedo soothes, tranquilizes and stimulates brain activity. They say that Stevenson wrote best when he smoked a pipe. I can easily understand this, for Tuxedo has helped me in some of my hardest cases."

"I smoked various brands. Finally, I bought Tuxedo. It has been with me since—my chief assistant

W. J. Flynn

Tuxedo TOBACCO

Tuxedo has made pipe smoking possible to thousands of men—because Tuxedo cannot bite nor irritate the mouth, nose or throat. Hundreds of well known physicians, orators, actors, lawyers, singers, lecturers, ministers and other public speakers testify that Tuxedo not only gives them the keenest pleasure but exercises a good influence on the throat.

Tuxedo has many imitators. None of them has yet discovered the "Tuxedo process." Tuxedo remains unique, unrivaled.

Lillian Russell 'Punches the Bag' to Get Strength

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 22.—Lillian Russell has taken to "punching the bag." Exclusive Ventnor in the vicinity of the Lillian Russell-Moore cottage, is stirred by the fact.

Morning after morning neighbors heard noises that sounded like the beating of carpets. After several days it was remarked that the Russell-Moore rugs would be worn out by continual beating. Then the maid of Mrs. Lillian Russell-Moore was interviewed.

"Why," said she, "Mrs. Russell-Moore is getting the muscles of her arms and legs (she said legs) in good condition, so she is punching the bag. She can smoke that bag talk. She can bounce it off her head, her elbows and even her knees when she lengthens the rope."

The maid also said Alexander P. Moore, the Pittsburgh editor, has been made to take up bag punching by his wife.

The maid refused to describe Mrs. Lillian Russell-Moore's punching bag costume.

MRS. ASTOR GETS MANY PROPOSALS

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Madeline Force Astor is fairly besieged with letters proposing marriage, or begging for money. Her maid has assumed such stupendous proportions that she has found it necessary to detail one of her servants to assist her private secretary in opening and sorting the mail.

Several of the letters are from impudent foreigners, who would woo the young widow. The begging letters ask all the way from $1 to $500,000. The person who asked $500,000 wished it to start a Socialist colony. Most of the begging letters were apparently from people who make a business of writing wealthy people.

M'DOWELL FESTIVAL OPENS AT PETERBORO

PETERBORO, N. H., Aug. 22.—The musical and dramatic festival given by the Edward MacDowell Memorial Association opened today, to continue through Sunday. Features are a fantastic sketch written by one of the members of the MacDowell memorial colony and a children's minuet. Probably most interest was taken in the grand fete before the King and Princess of Lorraine. Coleridge Taylor's "Hiawatha" was interpreted by the MacDowell Choral Club.

New Autumn Millinery

Paris is very emphatic this year when it comes to millinery styles. With one accord this great fashion source has acclaimed the large velvet hat and large plush hat, with either a drooping or roll brim and just a touch of contrasting ornamentation, as the smartest and most correct hat fashion.

No matter whether you go on the boulevards, to the races or famous outdoor restaurants of Paris, one sees nothing but those rich and effective, stylish and decidedly picturesque large velvet hats worn with a light, dainty summer gown that forms a decided contrast.

If you want to get in touch with all that is new and correct in Fall millinery, accept this as a personal invitation to visit our Second Floor Millinery Parlor.

"NOTE A FORGERY----BUT TRUE," SAYS PENROSE

$25,000 PART OF CONTRIBUTION OF WHICH ROOSEVELT GOT $100,000, SAYS SENATOR.

against him, which have followed the publication in Hearst's Magazine of certain correspondence between Penrose and Archbold.

The specific charge was that he received $25,000 from the Standard Oil Company, in return for favors in connection with an investigation of the company by a commission of which he was the chairman. This charge was plainly stated in the Pittsburgh Leader, as a result of the Senator's challenge.

Senator Penrose's defense was a quiet affair. When he finished his speech, in which he made a shower of questions poured in on him during the speech, and he finally, after stumblingly answering some of the questions, sat down in confusion. Even the "Old Guard" looked National committee was also at the Senate end of the Capitol.

"Certain letters from John D. Archbold, addressed to me," continued Senator Penrose, "have recently been published in Hearst's Magazine, and an effort has been made to establish a connection between work of the Industrial Commission, of which I was a member, and an alleged letter purporting to enclose $25,000 from John D. Archbold.

Their publication now, with the insinuations accompanying them, is in the nature of political blackmail, the purpose of which is to punish, coerce, or intimidate me because of my political course.

"The statement that there is any connection between the Industrial Commission and a certain check from John D. Archbold, is false, malicious and without justification.

"I now come to the letter alleged to have been written to me by John D. Archbold, enclosing a certificate of deposit in my favor for $25,000, written under date of October 12, 1904.

I have reason to believe that this letter is a forgery, and I challenge its production.

"But it is true, and at the time it was well known here during the Presidential campaign of 1904 I did receive such a contribution from Mr. Archbold for the campaign in Pennsylvania. The contribution was a part of a much larger one which I will not explain.

"Effrontery and Hypocrisy."

The effrontery, hypocrisy and mendacity of the Van Valkenburg-Flinn combination was disclosed by the correspondence between John D. Archbold and William Flinn.

"Thus it was discovered that while the fellow journals of Pennsylvania are exposing their abhorrence of what they denounce as a malodorous transaction on my part, within a few months of the date the alleged letter from John D. Archbold to me, Mr. William Flinn was asking the aid of same John D. Archbold to secure an appointment and election to the United States Senate and conducting an active correspondence with alm under a cipher code."

"I HIT HARD," SAYS COL. ROOSEVELT IN REPLY TO PENROSE

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Aug. 22.——"I think I have sufficiently answered Senator Penrose," exclaimed Colonel Roosevelt today, when asked if he would comment further upon the Pennsylvania's attack on him in the Senate.

"I hit hard; I never hit if I can help it," the ex-President added, "but I never hit softly."

The ex-President heard at the home of Father Curran, whose guest he is, what Senator Penrose had said.

"I'll have nothing to say about Mr. Penrose," said the Colonel.

The ex-President attended mass at the priest's church and was then taken in a parade to Harvey's Lake, fifteen miles in the city for lunch. In the parade were Catholic societies, miners and members of the Bull Moose order.

Col. Roosevelt was asked later if he was willing to go before the Senate investigating committee to testify to his attitude in the Standard Oil campaign contribution matter. The question he answered by snapping, "The letters and telegrams that passed between Clarkson and myself are enough."

Penrose Defence in Senate Is a Confession

Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, Republican leader in the United States Senate, answered yesterday the letters published in Hearst's Magazine for August, disclosing his intimate relations with, and his receipt of large sums of money from, the Standard Oil Company.

He admitted the $25.000 check sent him in 1904 by John D. Archbold, then vice-president and now president of the Standard Oil Company.

He said it was part of a contribution of $125.000 made by the Standard Oil Company to him as chairman of the Republican State Committee of Pennsylvania primaries.

Penrose said that Cornelius N. Bliss (who is dead and cannot deny it) told Mr. Archbold that President Roosevelt was very grateful to the Standard Oil Company for its contribution of $100,000, and Treasurer Bliss later asked for $150.000 more, which Archbold was willing to give. Other directors of Standard Oil, however, refused the additional $150,000.

As to Flinn, Senator Penrose read a letter and cipher telegrams exchanged between the Standard Oil Company and Flinn after the death of Senator Quay. In this letter Flinn asked the aid of the influence of the Standard Oil Company with Penrose, who controlled the Legislature, to make him (Flinn) United States Senator as Quay's successor.

Senator Penrose read the telegrams of reply sent by the Standard Oil in cipher, and then translated the cipher code of the Standard Oil Company for the benefit of the United States Senate.

The Standard Oil Company thus turned over its code book and its files of telegrams to Senator Penrose for his own defence to help him save himself and attack both Roosevelt, who, as President, prosecuted the Standard Oil Trust and secured its conviction, and Boss Flinn, who had recently dethroned Penrose as boss of Pennsylvania.

Penrose's long written statement was heard in absolute silence. It paralyzed the "Old Republican Guard" even more than the conviction and expulsion from the Senate of Lorimer a month ago.

Senator Penrose did not show that he had any comprehension how complete a moral ruin he had made of himself by his "confession" and "defence."

Days of usefulness over
Never really wears out

ALCO
Motor Trucks

How Long Do Your Horses Live?

Most horses have a working life of only four years. After that period of usefulness they are sold cheaply, drift from bad to worse, either die on an icy pavement or under a sizzling sun—or else they go back to the farm.

Sometimes horses last seven, eight and even nine years—but the day's work for such horses is usually not severe. Each horse has a certain amount of work in him and when that is taken out he is done for. It may take only two years to work the usefulness out of a horse.

Some concerns work a horse only two years and then sell him. They say it is more profitable to buy a fresh horse every two years.

But an Alco motor truck lasts more than twice as long. If an axle wears out a new one may replace it immediately. If a wheel goes bad a new wheel may be put on. If a motor has outlived its usefulness, a new one may be put in in a few minutes.

Thus an Alco truck may last—one might almost be tempted to say—forever. No Alco truck has ever worn out and there are Alco trucks five years old.

Before your horses give out why don't you acquaint yourself with the facts about the Alco truck? Every man who owns a horse should know about Alco trucks. They are being used possibly in the very same line of business as yours.

STIR OVER REPORT BURNS IS POISONED

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—A report from Denver, Col., today said Detective William J. Burns is there critically ill and is said to have been poisoned. The detective, according to the report, was stricken soon after meeting unidentified men. The story caused a shock here, as it was supposed Burns would be a witness today in the grand jury investigation of the Rosenthal case. The report was denied at the office of the Burns Detective Agency, No. 21 Park Row. Superintendent Dickson said: "There is nothing in the report. I had a telegram this morning from Mr. Burns. The telegram was sent from Denver."

"I PLAY THE GAME WITH BARE HANDS," DECLARES WILSON

SEAGIRT, N. J., Aug. 22.—Governor Wilson gets a strip-cousin illustration of his method of playing politics today. He was strolling across the lawn of the Little White House, and stopped a moment to watch a game of "catch" between his cousin, Jimmy Woodrow, and a newspaper correspondent.

"Get in the game, Governor," said Jimmy, jokingly.

"Oh, I might if I felt like it," was the reply.

"All right," said Jimmy, "I'll get you a glove."

"I wouldn't need a glove," said the Democratic nominee. "You know I play the game with bare hands."

SHOT BY JEALOUS HUSBAND, WOUNDED WOMAN DECLARES

SOUTHFIELD, N. H., Aug. 22.—Mrs. Flinn Strout was shot, perhaps fatally, by her husband is under arrest, accused later of the shooting as a result of a quarrel today. The bullet struck Mrs. Strout beside the nose and lodged under her ear.

Mr. Grant made this statement:

About 2 o'clock this morning, my husband came home. He was furious at something, and mad with jealousy of everybody I ever knew. He got up his revolver and began to rage around, and once discharged it into the floor. Finally, I got out of bed and try to reason with him. He seized me, we struggled and I fell to the floor. As I started to get up, he shot me.

IVAN ATTACKS MOOSE PLATFORM

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 22.—Colonel Bryan and his platform were given an official "lacing" in today's issue of W. J. Bryan's Commoner.

"The tariff plank is the same old sham that has been used for generations to deceive the public," the editorial says. "The protective system is held up as a sacred institution and support is given to the tariff commission idea, which is always brought forward to delay reduction when the people rise in revolt against high tariff taxes. The plank on the trust question is a restatement of Mr. Roosevelt's position which leads directly to Socialism."

WOMAN, PICKPOCKET 33 YEARS, IS JAILED

Annie Corrigan, giving her age as sixty-one and claiming a residence at No. 12 Hicket street, Charlestown, who has a record as a pickpocket dating back to 1879, was sentenced to the House of Correction for six months by Associate Justice J. Dorr Brackett in the West Roxbury District Court today. She was charged with the attempted larceny from an unidentified woman in the Forest Hills elevated local evening.

She has served time in Providence, Woburn and Philadelphia.

Mrs. Belmont to Bar Male Waiters at Beach Dinner

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—Waitresses and not waiters will serve Mrs. Belmont and her guests the night of Aug. 27, when she gives her dinner and dance for her protege, Miss Inez Milholland—and thereby hangs a tale. The entertainment for Miss Milholland will be given at Easton's Beach, and the dinner will be served in the beach restaurant. Mrs. Belmont has decided to have the regular beach waitresses serve her guests.

"For many years," said Mrs. Belmont, "men have served, and incompetence is the least of their faults. They are becoming worse, and hardly an entertainment takes place that they do not cause some unpleasantness. They cannot be trusted to serve wine, for every time they become tipsy."

YOUNG ROOSEVELT VISITS NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., arrived at the New Cliffs Hotel here this afternoon from Long Island, having ordered rooms reserved for a week. Mrs. Roosevelt was Miss Eleanor Butler Alexander, daughter of Henry Addison Alexander, formerly a New York lawyer, who now lives in Paris, where he is counsel for the American Embassy.

CURTIS WOULD SELL FLYING BOAT ABROAD

NEW York, Aug. 22.—Glen H. Curtiss, the aviator, sailed today on the steamer France, and will tour continental Europe for several months negotiating with various foreign governments, as well as dealers for the sale of his new "flying boat," as he calls it, or hydroplane.

ARRAIGN FIVE IN ROSENTHAL CASE

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Five of the seven men indicted for the murder of Herman Rosenthal were arraigned before Judge Crain in Part 1 of General Sessions today. They were Lieutenant Charles A. Becker, "Whitey" Lewis, Jacob A. Reich, better known as "Jack Sullivan," "Dago Frank" Cirofici and William Shapiro. Becker seemed crestfallen when he was haled before the bar with a band of gangsters.

After a tilt between Judge Mulqueen and Attorney John F. McIntyre, counsel for Becker, the pleading in the case of the police lieutenant was postponed until next Tuesday. Frank Muller, alias "Whitey" Lewis, entered a plea of "not guilty," and so did the other three.

Two of the men, "Lettie Louie" Rosenzweig and "Gyp the Blood" Horowitz, are still at large.

Immediately after the arraignment Coroner Feinberg resumed the inquest into the death of Rosenthal.

Louis Libby, pet owner of the gray "murder automobile," was discharged after the inquest today. Outside the coroner's court he was met by his mother and sisters, who greeted him with tears and hugs.

The verdict arrived at by the coroner's jury was as follows:

We the jury, find that Herman Rosenthal met with his death on the morning of July 16, at 2 o'clock, in front of the Hotel Metropole, Forty-Third street, between Sixth avenue and Broadway, from a bullet wound in the brain and the upper jaw and tongue, fired from a revolver or revolvers held in the hands of a person or persons unknown to this jury.

FARNSWORTH HELD TO AWAIT INQUEST

BROCKTON, Aug. 22.—When the case of David D. Farnsworth, forty, of Bridgewater, a magazine writer, charged with manslaughter in having killed Thomas Hagan, was called today in the Police Court, the District Attorney intervened and said that he would conduct an inquest on that case. This will occupy the court almost an entire day. Hagan was shot because he was supposed to be robbing the chicken roosts belonging to Farnsworth.

BOY ANCIENT IN A ROMANCE

The White Star liner Arabic brought back today, among her saloon passengers, a number of members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company who, with their wives, have been touring Europe by automobile. With them came Francis H. Appleton, 3rd., 10 years old, mascot of the company.

The youngest Ancient had quite a romance to tell of, but he hung his head and blushed furiously when asked about the young lady, about his own age, whom he held by the hand, and about the dog that trailed along behind.

The "lady" in the case is little Miss Alice Turner of Jersey City. Even the young Ancient admits that it was through the dog that he first became acquainted with her. The dog is a Chinese chow dog. The boy and girl became fast friends on the voyage over and were inseparable.

Little Miss Turner, accompanied her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Turner of Jersey City. They have been to their old home in Berkley, England.

Francis, 3rd, came with his father and mother, Sergeant Francis H. Appleton, 2nd, of the Ancients and Mrs. Appleton. The other Ancients who returned on the Arabic were: Mr. and Mrs. Stephen C. Lowe, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Macalman, Mr. and Mrs. Fred McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Milton C. Paige, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. S. Singleton.

POLITICIANS RALLY TO MARSHFIELD FAIR; LAWSON WILL SPEAK

MARSHFIELD, Aug. 22—The second day of the Marshfield Fair brought out a record breaking crowd today. They came from all around and in all sorts of equipages. Many came to hear President Thomas W. Lawson, who had promised to speak on the gifts he made the fair. He was to have quite a little to say of politics too, he said.

Thursday is the great political roundup day at the fair. Waller R. Torrey of Norwell, who wants the Bull Moose nomination for Congress in the Cape district, was one of the earliest arrivals, closely followed by Charles S. Groves of Hingham, who longs for the straight-out Republican nomination on the Cape. Congressman Robert O. Harris and William L. Turner of Norwell were on hand, as were Joseph Shepard of Pembroke, District Attorney Albert F. Barker, Assistant District Attorney Fred Katzmann, Henry T. Cole of Scituate, and Willard Howland.

THERE'S much satisfaction involved if you give or accept this mild, delightful "Turkish-blend." Most popular today with discriminating smokers. In a plain package—consequently only 15c.

500 TO CATCH 3 AD TAKERS

'Seek and you shall find"!

From the very beginning of the world treasures and bounties of earth have showered upon those who have had ambition and energy to seek for the good things around them. The captains of the Missea Ad Taker of the Boston AMERICAN must mean just $500.00 in gold for some AMERICAN readers.

All that is necessary for AMERICAN readers to do is to go to any one of the three places where the Missea Ad Taker is scheduled to be and to use their eyes.

The thing to remember is to watch for "The Lady with the Green Parasol." Make your plans now to go to Revere, Nantasket or Worcester next Sunday.

One Miss Ad Taker will appear at Revere Beach with a $100 order for the person who first recognizes and identifies her.

Another Miss Ad Taker will appear at Nantasket with another $100 order which goes to the first person who recognizes and identifies her.

The third Miss Ad Taker will appear at the White City at Lake Quinsigamond, Worcester, and she also will have an order for $100 to be given to the first person who recognizes and properly identifies her.

The young women will be at the three places mentioned between the hours of 2 and 5 next Sunday afternoon.

Study the photos in the Sunday AMERICAN and watch the daily AMERICAN.

All you have to do is to look the Sunday AMERICAN in your hand and say "You are Miss Ad Taker of the Boston AMERICAN."

There will be $200 in addition to these prizes. At Revere will be awarded $100 of this additional prize money. At Nantasket will be given $50 and at Worcester $50 of the additional prize money.

To receive one of the added prizes, you must have in your possession a receipt for a Boston AMERICAN want ad for any day this week or next Sunday.

The only thing that will prevent the positive appearance of the Misses Ad Taker is a continuous, steady downpour.

UNDERWOOD COMING FOR BAY STATE FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—According to Representative Burleson of Texas, who is manager of the Democratic speakers' bureau in this campaign, Representative Underwood will appear considerably in Massachusetts later in the Autumn.

$10 PRIZES FOR BATHING GIRLS

Notice to artists: Why not depict the typical New England Bathing Girl as she appears in her native habitat? The AMERICAN has undertaken to show its readers how the New England Bathing Girl looks. The pilgrimage to Revere Beach is taken by girls from all over New England. That is the one best place to find a type.

The AMERICAN camera artists will visit Revere again next Saturday and Sunday. From pictures taken Saturday one will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN. From those taken Sunday, one will be printed in Monday's AMERICAN. Each girl whose picture is printed on Sunday or Monday will be entitled to $10 when she calls for it at the Promotion Department, No. 2 Winthrop square.

HAY FEVER ATTACKS QUICKLY ENDED DON'T RUN AWAY FROM THIS DISEASE

Are you half sick for two or three months every summer with Hay Fever—violent sneezing spells, running at the nose, intense itching in the corners of the eyes, pain and soreness in the back of the throat, at nights a stuffed-up feeling in the head and an asthmatic wheezing in the throat and chest? If so, you can get almost instant relief by simply using a cleansing, healing antiseptic Cream called Ely's Cream Balm.

Hay Fever is due to an extremely sensitive condition of the membrane lining the nose and throat. Dust, smoke and certain odors irritate this delicate inside skin, it becomes inflamed, causing a watery discharge from the nose and violent spasms of sneezing.

Ely's Cream Balm will relieve all these distressing symptoms in five minutes' time. It opens up the air passages, soothes, heals and strengthens the weakened, inflamed membranes, restores them to healthy, normal condition, so that you are not subject to Hay Fever attacks.

Get a fifty cent bottle from your druggist today. Give it a fair trial, and get your money back if you are not satisfied.

It has been suggested by a member of the Bay State Automobile Association that the touring committee of the Association might provide a three-days' trip, starting the afternoon of August 31 and finishing on the night of Labor Day or the Tuesday following. Labor Day gives the opportunity of making a delightful outing and a repetition of such a one as that enjoyed in New Hampshire on June 17, would be successful.

P. E. Rand Hollander of the Flat Company is spending a few days in this vicinity.

Wallace Hood of the J. S. Harrington Company, has started on a motor tour through Rhode Island, Connecticut and Vermont, where he will establish agencies for a full line of Everitt cars and also Flanders Electrics.

Joe Warren, a factory representative of the Abbott-Detroit Company of New England, has gone on a trip through Maine, with a view to establishing agencies in the larger cities of that State.

George L. Waite, well known in Boston automobile circles, has been appointed salesmanager of the Thomas Motor Car Company of Buffalo, succeeding George Pfeidmonne. Mr. Waite is a pioneer in the industry.

RED SOX RILEY'S COLUMN PILGRIMS

JOHNNY McGRAW and his New York followers are trailing about the West looking for sympathy and finding, alas, that sympathy is near obsolete in this day and generation. The Giants had a postponed game to play with the Cubs and yesterday trekked to Chicago, where the Cubs slammed them in the nose to the tune of 4 to 0, and left the Giants only four and a half games to the good. Within the week the Cubs have taken three in four from the Giants.

* * *

NOW the Giants are in Pittsburgh, where they usually are belted now and then, while the Cubs have a crack at the Boston Pilgrims. After they finish with the Pirates the Giants hike to Cincinnati and, since the Reds have not won once from McGraw this year, it seems natural to suppose that "Hank" O'Day ought to take one game now, just as a matter of luck. While the Giants struggle with Cincinnati, Frank Chance and his Cubs ought to have some "easy picking" at the expense of McGraw's over-the-river enemies, the Brooklyn Dodgers. Does it look as if the Cubs would catch the Giants? Well, if not, it is a fair supposition that after the next two series that four and a half games margin will be less rather than greater.

* * *

AND, by way of passing, it may be remarked that "Big Jeff" Tesreau, McGraw's "hoops," was the man the Cubs beat. Richie was the lad who shut out the champions. Last Saturday when Richie beat the Giants, Chance handed him a check for $100 and observed:

"That's yours, boy, and there's another one like it every time you pull off the same job."

Hungry for another morsel of profit, Richie asked Chance for another shy at the Giants yesterday.

"All right. Go to it, kid," said Chance. And Richie went to it to the extent of keeping the plate entirely free of Giants. He earned another century.

* * *

INCIDENTAL to the National League squabble, did you notice that Johnny Kling's knockdown, cuff-spoked Pilgrims squeezed away with another game, 7 to 4, at Cincinnati while nobody was looking?

* * *

IT looks as if one of Jake Stahl's great quintet of pitchers was not so great as the other four. "Buck" O'Brien, of course. "Buck" has not pitched a complete game since August 1, when the Sox were beaten, 2 to 1, at St. Louis, notwithstanding the Browns made but three hits off O'Brien. He has appeared on the mound four times since, and in each case has been withdrawn.

* * *

EDDIE COLLINS, the Athletics' ready writer, must have "Buck" in mind when he based his opinion that "the Red Sox are fading," upon the fact that "day by day, with oftener recurring regularity, are two or more pitchers' names appearing in the Boston box scores."

* * *

O'BRIEN started yesterday's game against Cleveland and lasted just one inning. After two men were out, Jackson walked, Lajoie doubled, Johnson bunted and was safe when Carrigan's burned throw passed Engle and Olson slammed a two-bagger over Speaker's head. That collection netted three runs.

* * *

AS usual, Charlie Hall was the "wrecking crew." But Harry Hooper piled the wrecking crew on the rocks when he let Johnson's comeback drive pass him—and the ball game was gone, then and there.

* * *

JACKSON, by the way, hit safely four times in a row after walking the first time up. "Stonewall" is the man who is trailing in Speaker's batting footsteps. He made four runs, too.

* * *

WHILE the muddy base paths slowed up everybody else and caused most of the Red Sox errors, Jackson did not mind a bit. He scored twice on "squeeze" plays. In the fifth he dashed into the plate almost as Olson rapped one to Hall and, despite Hall's quick recovery and throw to Carrigan, he was safe. In the fourth he predicted the second, Olson bunting just as he made his run.

* * *

BILL CARRIGAN showed almost superhuman intuition in the second when the "Naps" were putting the game away. Johnson popped one almost fifteen feet in front of the plate and fully ten feet inside the third base line. Lajoie, who was on first, dashed for second and both he and Johnson were safe if the ball was fair. Carrigan let it roll, hoping to nail Lajoie at third if it were fair, yet having an old idea that it would roll foul. The ball had a "reverse English." It rolled at right angles to the left and bled away to foul territory as if Carrigan had wafted it along by some occult process. Afterwards Johnson struck out.

* * *

BIRMINGHAM hit to Wagner in the sixth and "Heinie" slipped and fell on his face. His right eye was choked full of mud and he lost all track of the ball. This gave Ryan a life at third, whence he scored later on Jackson's ferocious drive through the box.

* * *

ALVA WILLIAMS, the catcher whom the Red Sox released principally because he could not bat in Boston, is one of the star cloisters of the runners-up. It was Williams' three-base rap that won Saturday's game for the Senators, and Alva has been producing timely hits all season. He and Walter Johnson are Griffith's pet pinch hitters. You'll have to look a long distance to find other managers who use their battery men to wallop out victories in a pinch.

LAST CALL FOR OLD BALL TAGS

Today is the last day for the redemption of all numbered free baseball checks which do not bear a bid red X printed across the face of the check.

This means that today's numbers should be carefully examined, as all numbers, beginning tomorrow, that are called for, will be for checks that have been issued carrying the red X stamp.

Ask your newsdealer or newsboy for the checks when you get your paper.

Thousands and thousands of these new red X tickets have been and are now being distributed—each one numbered—and a list of one hundred numbers is printed every day, fifty in the early editions and fifty in the later editions.

All you have to do is to watch this daily list and when a number appears which is a duplicate of the number which is on the check you hold, bring or send same to the AMERICAN Promotion Dept., No. 8 Winthrop square, and you will receive a free ticket to any one of the Red Sox or Pilgrim games on the home grounds.

"Hap" Meyers, who played for a while with the Red Sox at first base and later with the St. Louis Browns, is now the property of the Pilgrims, and many predict that he will make good this time. Meyers is one of the fastest men in the minor leagues, and if he keeps up his work this season, he has a job for life in Pilgrim, he will be the sensation of the league. In the 100 games he has played he has piled seventy-seven bases and has batted over .300.

Dave Shean, the Arlington boy, former Pilgrims and Cub player, has proved to be a great leader of men for the Providence Grays. Dave gets on base quite regularly by waiting out the pitcher or hitting, and he's a fast man on the bases.

Don't be surprised if Henri O'Day, present manager of the Cincinnati Reds, calls balls and strikes in the American League next season. The rumor is afloat that "Hank" realizes that he is through as a big league skipper, so far as Rhineland is concerned, and will return to the girth of Illinois. It is said that it wouldn't be a pleasant job for O'Day to return to umpiring in a league in which he had registered a failure as a manager, and as a result will accept a position on President Ban Johnson's staff.

President Hedges of the St. Louis Browns says that Baumgartner and C. Brown will be star twirlers for his team next year. He would like to grab off Raphael Almeida, but the Cuban will be retained by the Cincinnati Reds, and will return to Cincinnati as soon as the Southern League season is over.

Have you noted the way the outfielders in the National League have slumped in their batting? Some time ago the leaders of the league were men like Snodgrass of the Giants, Magee of the Phillies and Schulte of the Cubs. Now the infielders and catchers—Zimmerman of the Cubs, Wagner of the Pirates, Meyers and Doyle of the Giants, Lobert of the Phillies and Sweeney of the Pilgrims are topping the organization. Miller is another game missing from the top rung.

PILGRIMS OPEN WITH THE CUBS

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—The Boston Pilgrims, bent on making trouble for the fast climbing Cubs and their ambitions to capture the National League pennant, arrived in town this morning to open up their three-game series here.

Manager Kling is elated over the manner his charges are going now, since the little shake-up in the infield. He feels confident that the Cubs will have their hands full during the next few days. The Cubs, however, do not fear the Pilgrims, and are counting on three games in a row, which they figure will be a great help while the Giants are fighting it out with the Pirates.

The Pilgrims showed their improved playing by taking yesterday's game from the Reds. If all the Boston team threw out of the four games played in Redland, which is going some. The Boston squad had their bats swinging in great style, and made life miserable for Frill and Humphries, the Reds' twirlers.

The Reds, helpless before Hub Perdue, as before all good pitchers, were badly beaten until the seventh, when they tied the score after two were out on a couple of hits, a pass and a lovely three-base wild throw by Jay Kirke, who redeemed himself by hitting in the ninth and winning the game.

In spite of their numerous errors, the Pilgrims pulled off some pretty plays, cutting the locals down many times when they looked to be about to break into the run column. No less than four of the O'Day crowd were killed at the plate by the sharp shooting of Kirke and Jackson. Anyone can see what a large difference it would have made in the final result if those four runs had come over, instead of being blocked off.

Perdue's game was a corker, the Reds being utterly helpless all the way through. They could not hit with men on the bases and they had enough men out down at the plate to have won the game if they had landed safely. Perdue backed all their efforts, and with good support would have allowed only one run.

Bill Bartlett has gone to his home in Bedford, Ind., for a few days' visit, and will then go to Boston. He will not be able to work for ten days or two weeks. Kling will do all the catching until Gowdy is able to play again, which will be in a few days.

Sox and Naps in Second Game

Stahl Out to Regain Big Lead

STANDING TODAY.

	W.	Lost.	P.C.
Boston	72	36	.667
Washington	72	44	.621
Philadelphia	67	46	.593

After having dropped four straight to the Athletics and three straight to the Senators, the Cleveland "Naps" came to Boston and let loose all of their venom upon the American League leaders. They caught the Red Sox on an off day, when Jake Stahl's champion-to-be let down after a hard aussie with the Tigers. The Sox expected to have an easy job with the "Naps," so they took life in a lackadaisical way. At the same time, the "Naps" were on their toes and played a wild-fire game. The contrast cost Boston a baseball game, 9 to 4.

With that upset in mind, the Red Sox went out today to pick up the loss they sustained yesterday. The Senators beat the Tigers, 3 to 1, on the first appearance of Detroit in Washington, wherefore the Red Sox lead the Washington hustlers by only 7½ games today. But Clark Griffith's men must play 38 games more and Jake Stahl's, Cobb and Griffith can never spot Stahl 7½ games in 38" and beat him.

All of the Red Sox losing material must have been worked off yesterday. Today the "Naps" will have to face Hugh Bedient and they will trim a different pitcher than "Buck" O'Brien and Charley Hall were yesterday. Cleveland discovered between hits concealed in the garments of O'Brien and Hall, and extracted all fourteen on one operation. They also found five long concealed errors hidden away in the Red Sox stronghold, and all five were uncorked at once. For the rest of the week Cleveland ought to go dry of base hits and Boston ought to be bereft of errors.

A busy little rain storm in Philadelphia prevented the Athletics from opening with the St. Louis Browns, so Stahl leads Mack today by the margin of ONLY eleven games; but since Mack has 41 games to play and Stahl has but 39, the world's champions are hopelessly out of the running.

"Buck" O'Brien started in to pitch yesterday's game for the Red Sox, but "Buck" had only one inning. After two men were out he passed Jackson, Lajoie doubled, and Carrigan, picking up Johnson's dribbler near the plate, threw past Engle and Olson, doubling over Speaker's head, three runs were scored.

Hooper's Costly Error.

Charlie Hall was called in to save the game, and he might have done so if Harry Hooper had not slipped. Peckinpaugh led off with a single and Blanding sacrificed him along. Ryan was hit and Birmingham died to Hooper. Jackson Angled to right, and that is where Hooper came to grief. He let the rap pass between his legs in the dark, and Peckinpaugh, Ryan and Jackson scored.

The Sox made two runs in the first inning, so the scores made off Erlen's pitching were not so disastrous. But when three more were added to the margin in the second, Blanding began to work hard, and the Sox never had pepper enough to bat out the difference thereafter.

Notes of the Links

Today at 1:30 p. m. the first ball will be played in the State foursomes tournament at the Country Club. The Vesper Country Club of Tyngsborough, Tyngsboro, meets the Brockton Country Club of Campello at this time. The remaining matches follow at five-minute intervals. All members of clubs belonging to the Massachusetts Golf Association are invited to witness the matches, and on Friday, when the second and semifinal rounds are played, a large gallery is assured. Saturday the final match will be played at 36 holes and there is no doubt but that a history-making contest will ensue.

Last year the Western Golf Association's open championship was held at the Kent Country Club, Grand Rapids, Michigan. Match play was the rule and Robert Simpson was the title from T. L. McNamara of Boston by 2 and 1 in the final. This season the contest will be played at the Idlewilde Country Club of Peoria, Ill., and will be medal play at 72 holes. First prize is $300, second $200, third $100, fourth $75, fifth $50. A gold medal emblematic of the championship will be awarded the player making the best one round score, 36 holes, on both Wednesday and Thursday next.

From Tuesday to Friday of next week will be the annual open tournament of the Stockbridge Golf Club of this State will hold sway, and it is expected that more of the Boston experts than ever before will attend the meeting.

Injured Umpires Are Greatly Improved

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 22.—Umpires William Brennan and Clarence Owen, injured in the next Pittsburg-Brooklyn game, are resting easy in the hospital, not as badly injured as at first believed. An X-ray photograph of Brennan's injury showed that a number of ligaments of the leg were torn, but the injury was repaired and he will probably leave the hospital today.

Owen is more seriously hurt, but no bones were broken, as was at first reported. The doctors expect to release him before the end of the week.

Going! Going!! Gone!!! All Our White Hopes Now White Jokes

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

"ONE by one they wander from us," is the refrain of an old song that treats of the desertion of the old homestead by successive members of the family. With a few simple changes the ditty would adapt itself to the white hope situation.

First, Carl Morris, and now Luther McCarthy, whom Billy McCarney, with flashing eyes and swelling breast, declared would one day grow so famous that his name would become a household word.

The New York critics let Luther down easy. When Jim Stewart suffough the big novice at every stage of a ten-round bout, they said McCarthy held out promise of improvement.

Avanzi and svast with such insincere twaddle! The white hope who has failed under trial, but who is "going to do better, when he has a fight or two under his belt," is in a class with a jaded champion who is "going to the mountains to recuperate." He is a mighty unsafe proposition.

It goes to show that after all fighting is a trade. The fighter who is born, and not made, is a science specimen of humanity.

In the light of what is happening, the sayings of Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and Jack Johnson seem epigrammatic.

"I can lick any man who has not had two years' experience in the professional ring," remarked Philadelphia John prior to his San Francisco go with Al Kaufman.

"Palzer is not ripe yet," said Champion Johnson, when asked at Las Vegas whether he regarded Palzer in the light of a possible opponent.

There was that in the tone which suggested that Johnson considered Palzer an easy mark, but felt that the big boob would have to be coddled along a bit further to stimulate public interest and increase the prospects of a large attendance.

The trouble with white hopes is that they are exploited mainly on their dimensions and before they have accomplished anything to speak of.

Size and strength and the power to smile are merely fundamental qualities for a cub heavyweight. They are not to useless until he has acquired a ring education, which, during almost any generation of pugilists, is a hard thing to acquire.

The woods are full of men who, with they lack real championship requirements, are plenty good enough to shatter the dreams of the hopes.

A dozen years ago Joe Choynski, Kid McCoy and a few others were the wooden dogs and trial horses of the heavyweight division. Today we have Jim Flynn and Jim Stewart.

They are hard fellows to get by. A trading by one of them has a double effect inasmuch as it sets a novice back and at the same time discourages him.

This is made apparent in the case of Carl Morris. Before he tackled Jim Flynn there was no such word as fluff in the bright lexicon of the stalfart Oklahoman.

Since then he has been a mark for every man he boxed.

Why Is Washington? Clarke Griffith Explains

Why is Washington?

This question is perplexing baseball fans the country over. Picked to win the basement championship, with an outside chance to finish seventh, the Nationals loom up as a pennant contender.

"The showing of the Washington club is a mistake."

"The team is traveling away above its speed."

"The club will take the ascension that has been predicted."

These are a few of the opinions expressed by fandom, ever since the club startled the baseball world by winning seventeen straight games, sixteen on foreign grounds.

The Washington club is NOT a mistake. It is not going to capture its usual honor, the cellar championship. It is not going to blow. The Nationals are a well-balanced ball club, playing ball that wins, and are going to have a whole lot to say as to what American League team shall play in the world's series.

Critics say that with the exception of Walter Johnson, Washington has no stars; that a team with only one star has no chance to win a pennant. I dispute the off-printed statement that Johnson is the only star on the team.

Clarke Griffith.

Who will deny that Clyde Milan is not a great outfielder? Cobb, Speaker and Jackson are the only men who class with him, and Cobb is really the only one who outstyles him.

Dan Moeller is a mighty near Star, while Howard Shanks, while not a great hitter, is a brilliant outfielder.

Prior to the start of the season, I realized that the Washington infield must be reconstructed. I had one real star infielder, George McBride, to build around.

First base loomed as the one big problem. Folks thought I was crazy when I paid $10,000 for "Chick" Gandil, but he changed the Nationals from a second division club into a pennant contender. Gandil now is the best first base man in the American League, if not the majors.

Another reason for Washington's rise is the catching department. John Henry and Eddie Ainsmith have no superiors, while Al Williams is a mighty good extra receiver.

Of course, Johnson is the star of the pitching staff, but Bob Groome, Tom Hughes, Carl Cashion and Jim Vaughan are pretty fair pitchers.

Why is Washington? Because it is a high-class ball club; a team that has confidence in its ability, that is always willing to take a chance; a team that never quits until the last man is retired.

Red Sox and Giants Biggest Money Makers on Diamond

According to information gleaned from baseball men conversant with the financial status of the various major league clubs, none of the club owners will lose money this year, in point of receipts versus expenses.

But it is openly stated that several magnates will find their profits are much less than they were a year ago.

The big money makers in the major leagues are the New York Nationals, Boston Red Sox, both Chicago clubs, the Pittsburghs, Washingtons and Athletics.

It is estimated that the Giants will yield nearly $250,000 in profits, which, in part, will pay for the new Brush Stadium.

The Red Sox have done a phenomenal business at home and abroad and may provide a net profit of $200,000 not including the world's series rakeoff if the team takes part in the big series in October.

The Chicago White Sox, while leading the American League race early in the season, coined money for Comiskey, and are still drawing big crowds at home, the profits being estimated at $175,000, if not more.

The Cubs didn't do so well at the outset, but since Chance's men have braced and are regarded as possible winners of the National League pennant, they have been playing to big money both in the Windy City and on the road.

The lowest estimate of C. W. Murphy's harvest is placed at $150,000.

It is said the Pittsburgh club may earn $100,000 or more, and that the great work of the Washingtons will net a similar amount, more than any previous Washington club ever made.

The champion Athletics have not drawn as much money as last year, it is said, which is due to the uncertain playing of Mack's men.

The Philadelphia Nationals, owing to the crippling of nearly all of their best players, will have a poor year, financially, but will break much better than even.

Detroit has shown a falling off in receipts, also Cleveland, while the Cincinnati club, on valiant work of the halfway mark was reached, will show a slump in attendance figures the rest of the campaign.

The Brooklyn club will not be a losing venture, it is said, and will make a small profit—say $50,000.

The New York Americans will not show a profit, but their profits will be less, it is said, than at any time since the club was first placed in this city.

The St. Louis Cardinals will clear, maybe, $25,000, while the Browns, it is believed, will beat a trifle better than even.

The Boston National, under heavy expense, will not be a losing venture as far as covering the regular running expenses is concerned, but the new owners, it is said, will have to wait until next year before recovering a part of the money already invested.

It is admitted that clubs visiting the Polo Grounds, for instance, have received enough money to keep them on a paying basis.

Final Swimming Meet for the Municipal A. A.

On Saturday afternoon of this week will be held the final meet of the series of district swimming meets, which have been conducted by the Municipal A. A. for boys and girls during August at various beaches in co-operation with the Bath Department.

The final meet will be held from the foot of the Union Boat Club. In this event will compete some of the swimmers who have qualified this Summer, as well as some of the older swimmers.

Groups will come from Wood Island, Treson, L. street, Dewey, McKenzie and North End Park beaches, where the district meets have been held. The first and second place winners in the preliminary meets will be awarded medals. The first, second and third winners of the final meet of Saturday will receive medals.

Boston and New York Plan Hockey League

Plans to form an intercity league of New York and Boston hockey teams are under way, and, in view of this, several leading hockey players of Boston and vicinity have gotten their friends together to talk over the makeup of the clubs.

Last year there were only two clubs representing Boston on the ice, but this year it is probable that there will be three.

The present plan is, it is said, to get the Wanderers, the St. Nicks and the New York A. C. teams to represent New York.

The B. A. A. is counted on as the mainstay in Boston. The two other teams have not yet been decided.

Boston lovers of the game will, if the intercity league goes through, see some good contests at the Arena this Winter.

Doherty to Captain Natick High Eleven

Victor J. Doherty, who played a star game at left end for the fast Natick high school football eleven last year, has been chosen captain of the team that will represent that school this Fall.

Doherty will have all of the 1911 team back with the exception of "Bill" Murray, the fine quarter-back, and Casey, the half-back.

Murray will enter Andover, and Casey is slated to enroll at Exeter, and if both make good at the two big prep schools they will oppose each other in the annual contest to be played at Andover the first Saturday in November.

Sets Up New Record In Fifteen-Mile Run

TACOMA, Wash., Aug. 22.—Setting a new world's record for fifteen miles on an indoor track, Jimmie Fitzgerald, the Australian runner, covered the distance in 1 hour 21 minutes 45 1-5 seconds in a race with Tom Longboat, of Seattle. Norman quit in the eleventh mile. The former world's record, 1 hour 22 minutes 56 seconds, held by Fred Appley of England, was made in 1909 in Winnipeg.

PACED PURSUIT RACE AT REVERE

The twenty-five mile motor-paced team race scheduled for next Saturday night at the Revere Cycle track will be a novelty in its way and the first race of itskind this season. It will be in the nature of a paced pursuit event, for the two teams will start from opposite sides of the track.

Nat Butler, manager of the track, has just returned from Newark, where he planned the coming race, and it is his intention that the local fans will get the best motor-paced pursuit race ever ridden at the beach oval.

Elmer Collins of Lynn and Clarence Carman of Newark will constitute one team and George Wiley, the "Syracuse Whirlwind," and Menus Bedell of New York will make up the other combination.

Another feature of the contest is that the men will get away from a standing start and ability to get under way quickly will count in the races.

While the race is new this year it has been tried in the past and has always proved exciting and interesting, the men having to ride on their merits, and does away with the advantage of pole position, for in the coming race a man can win without passing in front of his opponent.

Greer and Haines to Race On Labor Day

The lovers of sculling should see one of the greatest races ever held on the Charles River on Labor Day, when Frank B. Greer and William Haines will row over a three-mile course with a turn.

The athletes came to an agreement for the race and forfeits have been posted.

The race will be rowed over the regular Charles River Basin course, starting and finishing at the Union B. C. float. The boats will be held at the start and the race will be rowed under the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, except where they conflict with the agreement of the men.

Wrestling Stars Back on Mat Again Tonight

Wrestling comes into its own tonight in this city at the Grand Opera House where, under the direction of George Tuohey, there will be an exciting contest. Jack McGrath, the Irish giant, and Polaski, the big Pittsburger, will settle matters on the mat. The strangle and toe holds will be barred, otherwise everything else goes. This will be the first chance the fans have had of witnessing a big contest for some time in Boston.

Motor Boat Owners in Court Cup Fight

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—James A. Pugh, owner of the motor boat Disturber III, today obtained an injunction in the Circuit Court restraining officials of the Associated Yacht and Power Boat Clubs of America, from awarding the Wrigley trophy and a $1,500 cash prize to J. Stuart Blackton of New York, owner of the Baby Reliance II.

Blackton's speed boat was declared winner of the race, which featured Chicago's water carnival. Pugh alleges that the Baby Reliance was entered "unlawfully and wrongfully" in the race after he had won two heats.

Beauty Secrets of Footlight Favorites

OLIVE OIL AS AN AID TO THE PRETTY GIRL

MARJORIE BONNER.

(One of the Ziegfeld beauties in "A Winsome Widow" Company.)

By MARJORIE BONNER

SINCE you asked me what my secret of beauty is, I will tell you frankly, it is olive oil.

I use olive oil instead of cream and tonics; it takes the place of food; it has saved me doctor's bills and many a beauty treatment, and I think it is a panacea for all the ills that the thin girl is heir to.

To begin with, it was prescribed to me by a doctor when I was afraid that I would fade away if I got any thinner, and I have used it for every kind of ailment, from falling hair to hangnails.

I buy it by the can, and take it religiously after each meal, usually on lettuce, as I don't really like the taste of it pure.

A few leaves of lettuce, fresh and crisp, two tablespoonfuls of olive oil, and just a dash of lemon juice, to take away the insipid taste, and there you have my formula for a good complexion.

There really isn't anything better, for this diet will clear the skin and bring color back into the cheeks, providing, of course, one sticks to it. But you have to do that to accomplish anything, and with the olive oil treatment you want to keep on indefinitely.

I use olive oil on my neck to fill out the hollows in the pepper and salt boxes, and it has worked as well as any fattening cream.

I don't know why it is, but the skin absorbs olive oil so easily, and it seems to be able to take up so much more oil than cream, and, of course, that is the way to nourish the skin and to build up flesh.

Some time ago I began to worry about my arms, which were getting very thin. I tried the olive oil treatment on them, with such excellent results that a lot of other girls followed my example, and used the olive oil to make the arms plump.

What to Do

The treatment is like this: Before going to bed scrub the arms thoroughly with a stiff brush and soap and water. Rinse them off carefully and dry them just a little, enough to take the drops of water off while still leaving them moist. Now rub on your oil, and keep rubbing until the skin has absorbed all that it possibly will retain.

Wipe off whatever remains, and massage the arms with as much force as you can use, rubbing them upward, grasping the arm with the hand and wringing it at the same time.

Of course you must keep this up every night for a while, but it really will do the work and no one need go about with forearms like drumsticks.

I use olive oil instead of nail salve, and find it works like a charm. Every day when I am doing my nails I dip the fingers in olive oil to soften the cuticle, and I leave the oil on as long as I can. In Winter time, when the skin is very dry, I rub the oil on at night, at the same time that I am working on my arms, and I find that my finger nails have grown much stronger from this treatment.

I believe that if your finger nails are brittle and break off easily you could readily cure them of that tendency by rubbing them with olive oil, which must nourish the nail just as it does the rest of the body.

If you treat your fingers this way and then press back the cuticle you ought never to have hangnails at all, and your hands should always be smooth, soft and white.

Using Perfumes

Some people object to the smell of the olive oil, but that can be changed by adding a little perfume in the oil form, oil of lavender for instance, or oil of lemon verbena, which I like best of all. You can get these oils at any drug store, and an ounce will scent a gallon of olive oil. Of course, if you prefer, mix in a little of your favorite perfume instead.

Olive oil is so good for the hair that, if you use it constantly, you won't need any other tonic, and your hair will be as bright and shiny as if it had been brilliantined and polished.

I have a very dry skin naturally, and my scalp is inclined to be dry too. Before I shampoo my hair, I simply saturate my whole scalp with perfumed oil, rubbing it well into the hair, and then brushing it down to the roots of the hair.

I let it stay in twenty-four hours if possible, and then wash it out with tincture of green soap. For ordinary use, I take just a few drops of oil, rub them into the scalp, and then brush it with a perfectly clean brush until it is glossy. When my hair is done up I have a piece of velvet which I rub over it, as if it were a brush, and this gives an excellent lustre and sheen.

I think there is nothing so pretty as glossy hair, no matter what color it is, and this olive oil treatment will keep the hair shiny, if one brushes it well every night and shampoos it once in two weeks.

I have another use for olive oil, which few people have ever tried. Oil will keep the feet in splendid condition and make the skin so nice and soft that corns and callousses will never be allowed to form.

But, when all is said and done, I think that I get the best results from the oil taken with my food. I wonder why it is that we don't cook more with oil, and use so much lard or butter instead. Italian cooking is delicious, and they use quantities of oil, which gives their food a delightful taste, never found when lard or ordinary butter is used. And, goodness knows, most cooking butter is ordinary, it oughtn't to be called butter at all.

Good for Joints

Olive oil, taken internally or rubbed on the skin, is very good for creaking joints—and you know that young girls have creaking joints and worry about them a great deal more than the aged do. Sometimes if you should hear a row of girls bending their knees it's almost like a lot of little firecrackers going off.

This happens especially in Winter time. I don't know why, but it does, and olive oil is the cure for that, too.

My beauty treatment is not very romantic, I am afraid, but I am sure that it is one of the best, and in a small can of pure olive oil you have the cure for all kinds of troubles.

A Bachelor's Diary

ONE HAS LEONARD'S MASTERFUL MANNER GREATLY PUZZLES HIM

By MAX

AUGUST 3.—Beginning with the day when I first took notice of a framed sampler hanging on the walls of my grandmother's "front room," and which she worked when a child, I have read time and ocasion innumerable that one should pity the poor.

I spelled out the words on the sampler for myself, and when I could read them without faltering I was very proud. "It is not enough to know the verses," said my grandmother. "You must remember what they mean. You must pity the poor."

I grew up believing that poverty was the greatest sorrow life could bring. I think differently now. If I had the designing of sampler poems and could order the mottoes for little girls to work in cardboard, and could write the headline for all copybooks, there would be more appeals to pity the rich.

I have been poor; now I am rich. When I was poor I had an incentive, a hope, an ambition. Now I am rich I have nothing.

"You should find happiness in making others happy," said a friend. I make a great many people happy: I am not selfish, and turn down no appeals and give much without waiting for the appeal. Mary's niece and nephews are not the only children whose welfare depends on me. Up in the country there is a camp where I am sending twenty invalid children. I know I am making them happy, but this knowledge does not satisfy the hungry craving in my heart.

Sombre Thoughts

I want my own! I want some one who belongs to ME! I have lost in Elizabeth a joy that caring for a hundred children can never replace.

So I say Pity the Rich! There is a joy in signing checks that mean restored health to poor, neglected little waifs, but it can not compare with the joy the poor man knows when he has a little one of his own flesh and blood in his arms.

I may know privation and hardship, but they are pleasant fellow travelers compared with loneliness.

I would not write a word like this, Diary, if I had any one on earth to whom I could make it. But I have no one.

Sometimes I go out to the stables and talk to Tompkins. He comes nearer being a comfort than any other source, for he knows that he loved the child I lost.

August 4.—I was sitting on the front porch this evening smoking, and wishing for company, and knowing there would be none, when a shabby rain coming down, when a woman came hurriedly down the walk and turned in at my gate.

It was Miss Leonard, the "flesh" of so many unsolicited parties.

"You are surprised, I know," she said with a laugh, "and also somewhat shocked. You belong to the old school, which does not approve of a woman making an unchaperoned call on a man; I don't."

The woman possesses a power of mind reading that is almost uncanny. I was surprised and somewhat ill at ease. What, I was thinking, as I brought forth a chair for her, meanwhile mumbling something about my pleasure at having my loneliness relieved, would her friends say if they knew it?

"Oh," she went on, throwing her hat on the chair beside her, and removing her gloves, "my friends wouldn't care. They are used to me. You see, I am a business woman, and a business woman has special privileges.

Very Frank

"Besides," with alarming frankness, "I like you and I intend that we shall become better acquainted."

Naturally, I was pleased. I believe I said so. But what I say doesn't amount to much. My purpose in writing this diary is to tell what others say and what I do. I don't do much, but I say even less.

She had called, she said, to talk to me about redecorating my library, and went into the house, and I turned on all the lights that she might get a better idea of what the room needed.

"Turn off every light but the one in the reading lamp," she commanded. "This room is to READ IN; it is not intended to be brilliantly illuminated like a ballroom. I want it to have a cozy, restful look; that is not possible with headlight effects."

She talked rapidly, going from window to door, looking critically at the arrangement of the room, pushing a chair here and another there, and ordering me to do the same with my Sleepy Hollow chairs and lounges. It was diverting and amusing. Miss Leonard is a type of the new woman I had never known. I told her so, and expressed the hope that I would see her often.

"Oh, you will," she said; "I have taken a room in your neighborhood for the very purpose of seeing you often. You see," she added, as if it were an afterthought, "I want to make my masterpiece of your library. And when that is done I want you to be so pleased you will let me decorate the entire house. Your dining room is a shock to good taste in its present hideous colors."

I rather resented this. I had had it done over only the Summer before and got the best there was.

"Oh, I know what you are thinking," she said. "But you must remember that you had a MAN do it for you! Your house needs a woman's hand. I propose to be the woman behind the hand."

Now, what other woman in the world would say a thing like that!

She left as unceremoniously as she had come. She refused to let me take her home, and said goodby with the "threat" that she would be over soon again.

"Dear me!" she cried, as, bidding a hatpin through her hat, "should have a mission in life, I have made up my mind that mine is to be my mission."

Now, what, and how much, did she mean by that?

Keeping Accounts

By DOROTHY DIX

A MAN who is a methodical, careful, business-like person, trained to business accuracy, complains bitterly that he cannot make his wife keep books.

He makes her a generous allowance, and he adds that it is his right that she should make an accounting to him showing where every penny went, and because she refuses to do this there is endless bickering and quarrelling between them.

Theoretically, I agree with the husband. Personally, I side with the wife. For myself, I had rather do a day's washing than keep accounts of figures, and it has always seemed to me that when money is spent it is just as much gone whether you bought ice cream soda or corned beef and cabbage with it.

However, I am quite aware that this is no proper way to view the subject, and I am sure that those who look over their account books where every item of expenditure is rigorously set down and see how they wasted a quarter for cigars here, and fifteen cents for drinks there, and a nickel for chocolate creams in another place, and a dollar and a half for a new tie in still another, must look on a day of judgment just that is good for their souls and makes for economy. Certainly we never realize how much money we fool away until our extravagances rise up from our little account books and confront us.

Otherwise we should all be erecting Woolworth buildings, which, as the prudent point out to us, was built with dimes.

Undoubtedly the account book makes for thrift and judicious management. One of the first things that they teach girls in the school of domestic science is the necessity for having a household budget in which the expenses of running a family are proportioned and a certain per cent. of the income set apart for rent, and food, and clothing, and sickness, and amusements, and so on.

Much Better

It is easy to see how much better and more intelligently a woman can manage a household who goes about it in this systematic manner, and whose accuracy kept books show her just whose she stands, than she can if she adopts the hit-or-miss style of family financiering, where it's always a feast or a famine and the first of the month invariably finds her appalled at the size of the bills.

It is frequently said that if any business man conducted his affairs in as slap-dash a manner as his wife does hers he would land in the bankruptcy court inside of a year. Doubtless this is true. It is one of the greatest injustices done women that girls are rarely trained to business methods or ever given any money to handle, so that when they come to spend their husband's earnings they do not know how to do it to the best advantage.

Nor do they take kindly to being taught business methods when their husbands try to instruct them, as in the case of the man cited in the beginning of the article. On the contrary, when a husband tries to induce his wife to keep books she is apt to accuse him of penuriousness in the matter of household.

The wife is wrong in this. Inasmuch as marriage is a partnership in which the husband supplies the money for running the home, and the woman does the active work of making the home, it is nothing more than fair that the wife should keep a record of the funds that pass through her hands and be able to give an account of her stewardship. He has a perfect right to know how his money is used and whether it is wasted or not.

Partners in business who are managing different ends of an enterprise look over each other's accounts, and there is no reason why a wife should feel miffed if her husband wants to take a peek at her expense book and find out how she is conducting her department.

If every married woman would keep an accurate account of every cent that she spent on the family and not only permit her husband to see it, but force him to look over her books every month, it would not only be a good thing economically, but it would be an eye-opener to the man and stop the eternal growl about woman's extravagance.

The average man always acts as if his wife spent all the money on herself. You would think, to hear him talk, that she ate food and monopolized all the light and heat in the house, and it would put a quietus on him if he was forced to read, item by item, of pecks of potatoes and pounds of coffee and sugar, and dozens of eggs and beefsteaks, and mutton chops and tripe and onions, and sex with his own eyes that it was for these necessities for the family and not on her own adornment that his money was spent.

Gross Impertinence

While the husband has the right, however, to demand an accounting from his wife for the money she spends on the household, it is an invasion of her personal liberty, and an impertinent interference, for him to even ask to know what she did with her own allowance. That is here to do with as she pleases, and he lacks something of being a gentleman if he presumes to keep any espionage over her in that most wives have no personal allowance, and never a penny that they may do with as they like, is only too true, and it does more than any other one thing to cause their restlessness and discontent among married women. To a grown up woman it is as much gall and wormwood to be financially dependent as it is to be a man, and it is the smoulderings bitterness engendered by this state of affairs that makes many a marriage a failure.

The woman who gives her whole life to a man, who bears his children, who makes him a home, who spends every ounce of her strength and vitality in serving him and furthering his interests, and who gives him a labor that he could not buy for money, feels that she is, at least, entitled to such wages as a cook or a nurse maid might get, and to spend that much money without giving any more account of it to her husband than a cook or a nurse maid to whom is given an equal amount would give him. But she rarely gets that much paltry sum to do with as she pleases, and this is what makes the financial situation to often acute between husband and wife.

The man who insists upon his wife keeping household accounts is right. She will be a better and a more careful manager for doing it, and it is but just that he should know how his partner is managing her side of the business. But the wife has a right to a private allowance of her own, to do with absolutely as she likes, and it is her privilege to do with this as she sees fit.

Her husband has no more right to demand an accounting of this money than he has of any strange woman's income. She has earned it over and over again, and it is hers.

Up-to-Date Jokes

"Of course I am wrong! I am always in the wrong, am I not?" exclaimed an irate husband during an alteration with his wife.

"No, dear," was the brilliantly sweet answer; "not always."

"Not always!" echoed her husband. "Why, whenever did you allow that I was right?"

"Last week, dear, when you admitted you were wrong. I said you were right then in confessing it."

A noted professor of music, a German, was supervising the work of an orchestra at rehearsal, and he became much annoyed with the conductor for his erratic use of the baton. Stopping the band, he said to the culprit:

The Use of a Great Man

ONE HAS RECENTLY DIED IN FRANCE, AND PEOPLE ARE INQUIRING WHAT HE WAS GOOD FOR

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

A GRAND funeral was given in Paris a couple of weeks ago to Henry Poincare, of whom, probably, many readers of these lines have never heard. The procession to the grave was imposing. There marched, bare-headed, through the streets, between sidewalks crowded with spectators, most of whom also respectfully removed their hats, a long double line of the most distinguished living Frenchmen. When the grave was reached impressive discourses were pronounced by M. Guist'hau, who spoke for the government and the University; by Mr. Claretie, who represented the famous Academie Francaise; by M. Painleve, who was the mouthpiece of the Academy of Sciences, and by many others whose names are better known to the public than was that of the subject of their discourses.

HENRI POINCARE IN HIS STUDY.

All the newspapers were filled with praise of the dead man, and all the illustrated journals printed portraits of him. Everybody was assured, and the assurance was repeated from mouth to mouth, that France had lost one of her greatest lights, whose fame in the history of science and the renown would illustrate the pages of her history. Everybody felt proud because his country had produced so mighty a genius.

But a singular fact soon became evident, viz., that among the hundreds of thousands who represented the people of the humbler grades hardly any one had a definite idea of the reason or of what he had done. They only knew that, somehow, he had been A GREAT MAN.

During his lifetime it was said that there were only to or three men in all Europe who could comprehend him.

It is almost certain that among those who pronounced eulogiums at his tomb there were some who could follow his work with complete understanding. Most of them did not know even the A-B-C of it.

Who He Was

For Henri Poincare was a very great mathematician, perhaps the greatest since Lapiace and Lagrange, whom Napoleon, with his vast practical genius, could not understand. For most people mathematics, in its higher forms, is a closed book.

Naturally, then, after the first sensation caused by the departure of this great genius had died away, the question began to be asked: "What was he good for, after all?"

That question has been asked, and rather indelicately answered, in many newspapers. It cannot be answered by giving a list of his 1,500 works, for even the most popular of them, like the book on "Science and Hypothesis," are full of things which only the expert can read understandingly, while most of them are addressed to the ELITE of science, the narrow inner circle to enter which requires years of severe study and extraordinary talent and years of application.

But it does not follow that some answer cannot be given. The best answer to the question is the first place, one great use of such a man as Poincare is the stimulation which he imparts to the average human being. He awakes the ambition of the race by showing of what height able it is the man on the top of the apparently inaccessible mountain, who by his mere presence there, shows that the way to the top is of ascendible. It is he like the late Edward Whymper, having won up from the summit of the terrible Matterhorn. Anybody with good wind and strong muscles can ascend the Matterhorn now, because the way is known.

But Poincare would never have given an impetus to his fellow beings if he had not, like Newton before him, and like all great men, disclaimed the possession of any superhuman power. Newton said that all he had done seemed to him but as the picking up of a pebble on the shore of the boundless ocean of knowledge, and Poincare declared that the mind of man is only a flash of lightning, illuminating for the moment a part of the illimitable expanse around.

But these flashes succeed one another, and the race, as a whole, retains a little of what each reveals and adds to it that which has already been acquired. What was revealed to the genius of the great French mathematician was not always perfectly clear even to himself, while for the majority of men it was but a flash in the night which showed them nothing. His successors, guided by the glimpses he had, will make it all clear, and thus the domain of human knowledge will be extended.

Additions to Knowledge

In the second place, the usefulness of such a man as Poincare consists in the actual additions that he made to knowledge. Those additions were purely mathematical and incapable of popular explanation, but there are men who can understand them, and who, with THEIR successors, will, upon the basis which he left, erect a new edifice of science which all can enter and enjoy. This is what happened when Newton's "Principia" was as far beyond the intellectual reach of the average man as Poincare's most abstruse work is today, but now, thanks to the advance which it, itself, inspired, any boy in college, with a mathematical gift and proper application, can read the whole "Principia" understandingly.

Great men of this stamp are the pioneers of the human intellect, and happy is the country that can produce one in a century.

Hot Weather Helps for Skin and Hair

The hot winds and scorching sun of summer will not mar the clear, velvety complexion and delicate skin if a plain spermax lotion is applied each day. You can prepare your own lotion for a trifling sum by stirring two teaspoonfuls glycerine in ½ pint witch hazel (or hot water), then adding 4 ounces spermax. This spermax lotion is invisible when on, does not cake, shrink or rub off and will banish tan, freckles, lines, age-marks and sallowness, as well as dispel the oily, shiny condition.

Hair shampooed frequently with a teaspoonful cantharx dissolved in a cup of hot water will quickly regain its former rich color and gloss and always be soft and silky. Nothing can equal cantharx to promote a clean, healthy condition of hair and scalp, and its use keeps the hair beautifully soft and lustrous during the most trying days of summer

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I SEE there is going to be a swell row over that Astor will," said the Manicure Lady. "It seems that, on account of the Astor baby being a boy, there is likely to be a lawsuit that means twenty or thirty millions."

"Don't talk to be about no millions," said the Head Barber morosely. "I didn't have enough left this morning after I had paid the rent to buy a lunch for a vegetarian. And I've got to face the week to come with a four-bit piece. What do you know about that?"

"Don't bore me with none of them hard luck stories," said the Manicure Lady. "If I was to tell you half of the mental and financial anguish that has been wringing my soul this last few days, George, you wouldn't believe one-quarter of the half I told you. Even the old gent has got the habit of touching me for an occasional five. I happened to mention, in an unguarded moment at breakfast the other morning, that my banker had just sent me 250 beans, the interest on the last 5,000 of my inheritance, and it wasn't very long before I seen that I had made a mistake in a foxy pass, as them French calls it. Right away my worst fears was justified. The old gent says to me, 'Daughter, you are growing more beautiful with the passing years. The morning sunlight never looks so beautiful as when it is touching up your hair with a golden splendor,' he says to me."

I think that is some compliment for a father to give to his daughter," said the Head Barber.

"It would have been some compliment," said the Manicure Lady. "If the old gent had handed it to me before I got my inheritance, when I was just going along listening to the talk of a lot of men that drops in to hold other folks by the hand while they are having their nails did, but coming as it did right after my mentioning that 250 beans I began to smell a rat. In the old days father never said nothing about the morning sun touching up my hair—though he did say something about my touching up my own hair. Don't try to tell me, George. Any time anybody hands you the salve when you are broke, you can take that salve and smear it over your aching heart with it, but when they salve you after you have shown a bunch of yellow bills, you've got a right to suspect them of a exterior motive, or whatever it is folks call having a axe to grind.

"But poor old dad wasn't the only one. Brother Wilfred comes right along with a beaming smile and says, 'Mother, don't you think Sis is getting more and more stuck on herself every day?' The poor boy was that anxious to stand strong with me that he didn't stop to think about the night before, when him and me was having a quiet pal session, and I told me that I would like a sack of shelled corn tied in the middle, like a lumpy hunk glass. Believe me, George, I didn't fall for any of the coarse work. I took my little check and booked it at one of them banks where Mister Becker has been depositing the savings of a lifetime—only I put mine in a different safety deposit vault, of course, because I didn't want nothing what a Hentenant might do with somebody's dough."

"Right you are," said the Head Barber. "Since this Becker case the more I hear about low licensing the more I am satisfied to be a high private."

At first, the cadence and full music of the tones conveyed nothing to our far from literary detective. The victim of his secret machinations was expressing himself in words—that was the point which counted with him. But as he listened longer and gradually took in the sense of these words, his heart went down lower and lower till it reached his boots. His inscrutable and ever disappointing neighbor was not indulging in self-communings of any kind. He was reciting poetry, and what was worse, poetry which he only half remembered and was trying to recall—an incredible occupation for a man weighted with a criminal secret.

Sweetwater was disgusted and was withdrawing in high indignation from his vantage point when something occurred of a startling enough nature to hold him where he was in almost breathless expectation.

The hole, which, in the darkness of the closet was always faintly visible, even when the light was not very strong in the adjoining room, had suddenly become a bright and shining loop-hole, with a suggestion of movement in the space beyond. The hook which had hid this hole on Brotherson's side had been taken down—the one hook in all those hundreds whose removal had threatened Sweetwater's schemes, if not himself.

For an instant the thwarted detective listened for the angry shout or the smothered oath which would naturally follow the discovery by Brotherson of this attempted interference with his privacy.

But all was still on his side of the wall. A rustling of leaves could be heard, as the investor searched for the poem he wanted, but nothing more. In withdrawing the book he had failed to notice the hole in the plaster back of it. But he could hardly fail to see it when he came to put the book back. Meantime, suspense for Sweetwater.

Great Words

It was several minutes before he heard Mr. Brotherson's voice again, then it was in reluctant repetition of the lines which had escaped his memory. They were great words surely and Sweetwater never forgot them, but the impression which they made upon his mind, an impression so forcible that he was able to repeat them months afterward to Mr. Gryce, did not prevent him from noting the tone in which they were uttered, nor the third which followed as the book was thrown down upon the floor.

"Fool!" The word rang out in bitter irony from his irate neighbor's lips. "What does he know of woman? Woman! Let him court a cleft one and see—but that's all over and done with. No more harping on that string, and no more reading of poetry. I'll never"—— The rest was lost in his throat and was quite unintelligible to the anxious listener.

Self-revealing words, which an instant before would have aroused Sweetwater's deepest interest! But they had suddenly lost all force for the unhappy listener. The sight of that hole still shining brightly before his eyes had distracted his thoughts and roused his liveliest apprehensions. If that book should be allowed to lie where it had fallen, then he was in for a period of uncertainty he shrank from contemplating. Any moment his neighbor might look up and catch sight of this hole bored in the backing of the shelves before him. Could the man who had been guilty of subjecting him for this outrage stand the strain of waiting indefinitely for the moment of discovery? He doubted it. If the suspense lasted too long.

Shifting his position, he placed his eye where his ear had been. He could see very little. The space before him, limited as it was to the width of the one volume withdrawn, precluded his seeing aught but what lay directly before him. Happily, it was in this narrow line of vision that Mr. Brotherson stood. He had resumed work upon his model, and was so placed that, while his face was not visible, his hands were, and as Sweetwater watched these hands and noted the deftness of their manipulation, he was enough of a workman to realize that work so fine called for an undivided attention. He need not fear the gaze shifting while those hands moved as surely as they did now.

Relieved for the moment, he left his post, and sitting down on the edge of his cot, gave himself up to thought.

He deserved this reverence. Had he profited properly by Mr. Gryce's teachings he would not have been caught like this; he would have calculated not upon the nine hundred and ninety-nine chances of that book being left alone, but upon the inconsiderable one of its being the very one to be singled out and removed. Had he done this—had he taken pains to no roughen and discolor the opening he had made that it would look like an ancient rat hole instead of showing a clean bore, he would have some answer to give Brotherson when he came to question him in regard to it. But now this whole thing seemed up. He had shown himself a fool and by good rights ought to acknowledge his defeat and return to Headquarters. But he had too much spirit for that. He would rather—yes, he would rather face the pistol he had once seen in his enemy's hand. Yet it was hard to sit here waiting—waiting.

A Sudden Resolve.

Suddenly he started upright. He would go meet his fate—be present in the room itself when the discovery was made which threatened to upset all his plans. He was not ashamed of his calling, and Brotherson would think twice before attacking him when once convinced that he had the department behind him.

"Excuse me, comrade," were the words with which he endeavored to account for his presence at Brotherson's door. "My lamp smells so and I've made such a mess of my work today that I've just stepped in for a chat. If I'm not wanted, say so. I don't want to bother you, but you do look pleasant here. I hope the thing I'm turning over in my head—every man has his schemes for making a fortune, you know—will be a success some day. I'd like a big room like this, and a lot of books, and—and pictures."

Craning his neck, he took a peep at the shelves, with an air of open admiration which effectually concealed his real purpose. What he wanted was to catch one glimpse of that empty space from his present standpoint, and he was both astonished and relieved to note how narrow and inconspicuous it looked. Certainly, he had less to fear than he supposed, and when, upon Mr. Brotherson's invitation, he stepped into the room, it was with a dash of his former audacity, which gave him, unfortunately, perhaps, a quick, strong and unexpected likeness to his old self.

But if Brotherson noticed this, nothing in his manner gave proof of the fact. Though usually averse to visitors, especially when employed as at present on his precious model, he quite warmed toward his unexpected guest, and even led the way to where it stood uncovered on the table.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE STREET, Aug. 22.—The Boston market was quiet and irregular during the first hour. Butte & Superior, Arizona Commercial, Shannon and Amalgamated made gains, and Copper Range, Nevada Consolidated and Osceola sold lower. Calumet & Hecla ex-dividend was down 10.

North Butte was conspicuous at the opening.

Canadian Pacific Falls.

A drop of three points in Canadian Pacific by selling in London and New York was the chief feature of the New York market at the opening. Canadian Pacific opened at 223½, or one point lower on the second sale, it lost 2½; on the third sale it was 2½ lower and on the fourth sale it was three points under Wednesday's close.

Steel was ¼ higher at the opening, later losing its gains.

Amalgamated Copper opened at 87⅛, a gain of ⅛, then went to 88, which was within ⅛ of its new high record set yesterday.

A number of stocks showed concessions. Among them were Erie common, Atchison, Lehigh Valley, Reading, Union Pacific and Southern Railway. All the losses were fractional. The tone was heavy.

The curb was dull.

Americans in London were steady.

Copper Metal Market.

It is expected in selling circles that European demand for copper will be renewed next week. Recent sales have been for domestic delivery, and not large.

In the London copper metal market today quotations were close to the high for the year, spot opening at £76 10s, and futures at £79 7s. 6d. Spot had advanced 5s. since yesterday and futures 3s. 9d.

HOW THE TARIFF TAXES LABORER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—In a statement which is to be used as a Democratic campaign document, Leader Underwood today gave a vivid illustration of the burden which, he claims, the high tariff inflicts upon the public. The majority leader described a laboring man and sought to show how everything he used is increased in value because of the protective tariff. The statement follows:

"Under the present oppressive tariff law the laboring man returns at night clad in a woolen suit taxed 75 per cent, shoes taxed 12 per cent, socks and underwear 71 per cent., a cotton shirt taxed 50 per cent, and a wool hat and woolen gloves taxed 78 per cent. He carries a dinner pail taxed 45 per cent, and greets his wife as she looks through a window pane taxed 62 per cent., with a curtain taxed 43 per cent framing her.

"After scraping his shoes on an iron scraper taxed 75 per cent., he wipes them on a mat taxed 50 per cent. He lifts the door latch taxed 45 per cent., steps on a carpet taxed 62 per cent., and kisses his wife, who is clad in a woolen dress taxed 44 per cent. She is mending an umbrella taxed 45 per cent. with thread taxed 30 per cent.

"The house is made of bricks taxed 25 per cent, and lumber taxed 9 per cent. The paint taxed 32 per cent. The wall paper is taxed 25 per cent, and the plain furniture 35 per cent. He hangs his pail on a steel pin taxed 45 per cent., uses his soap taxed 20 per cent, and cuddles his baby with a rubber comb taxed 45 per cent. before a looking glass taxed 45 per cent.

"He eats his supper which was cooked on a stove taxed 45 per cent., from pots and kettles taxed 45 per cent. On plate table companions crockery taxed 55 per cent., and cheap glass tumblers taxed 45 per cent. The sugar he puts in his tea is taxed 34 per cent. and he stirs it with a spoon taxed 45 per cent.

His frugal meal consists of salt fish taxed 10 per cent., bread 20 per cent., potatoes 22 per cent., salt 53 per cent., butter 24 per cent. and rice 20 per cent. He cuts this with a knife and fork taxed 35 per cent., he sleeps in an iron bed taxed 45 per cent., on a mattress taxed 20 per cent., with sheets 45 per cent., blankets 75 per cent. and a counterpane to spread taxed 45 per cent."

Representative Underwood reviewed in detail the legislation passed by the Democratic House, declaring that it would have ended this "outrageous general taxation" and asserting that the Republicans by breaking faith on tariff legislation had shown the general policy to be one of "misconduct, extravagance and greed."

STANFORD WHITE'S WIDOW IS ROBBED

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 22.—Many thousands of dollars' worth of tapestries, dating back to the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, which had been collected by Stanford White, the noted New York architect who was killed by Harry K. Thaw, have been stolen from his widow's Summer home here. Mrs. White had the tapestries packed away when she left to Europe in January, and after her return a week ago discovered the loss.

AUTOPSY ON GIRL IN LYNN MYSTERY

An autopsy will probably be performed today upon the body of Annie Sabitski, the nineteen-year-old Russian girl who died at the Lynn Hospital.

The greatest mystery surrounds the death of this young girl, an accomplished pianist, pretty and of evident education, who persistently thwarted all efforts of the police to learn her identity, her history, her relatives and the cause of her condition.

Terminate the Treaty Rather Than Yield to England's Dictation

In his Panama Canal message Mr. Taft proves himself a lawyer first, an American afterward. He asserts our right to conduct the canal as we choose. But he asks Congress to invite foreign shipowners to test in the American courts our rights to control our own domestic possessions. To Mr. Taft nothing exists until established by judicial decision, not even patriotism.

Congress will refuse to grant the resolution. The Senate Canal Committee has already so voted. If for that reason Mr. Taft sees fit to veto the bill, the country will be the gainer. The good in the bill is more than offset by the bad. No virtue that it contains can atone for its surrender of the principle of full control of the Panama Canal by the nation that built it, manages it and owns it.

We hope we have as high a regard for the honor of this nation, and as firm a belief in its duty to keep all its promises, as Mr. Taft. But we do not believe that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty binds this country to submit to foreign interference in the management of its own property, as contended by the British interests and their Tory allies among American newspapers.

The best proof that the treaty is not open to such construction is the admission by the chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, that, had he believed it could be so interpreted, he never would have reported it to the Senate.

We shall be glad, therefore, to see Mr. Taft veto the bill, not for the reasons that he will give, viz., that the bill asserts American rights too strongly, but for the opposite reason, that it does not assert them strongly enough.

We know that when the bill is sent back to Congress newly aroused American sentiment will cause such revision that IT WILL BE FAVORABLE TO AMERICAN SHIPS.

The main thing, as we have said, is to establish the right of American control of the canal as a domestic possession. If we allow all American ships free we have established that right. We can change the rules later, if it is desirable. But if we concede England's claim and forbid free tolls to American ships, we have abandoned the right, and will be unable to insist on it later. And when the question of fortification arises, and our right to the canal as a domestic possession has been forfeited before the world, it is easy to foresee in what an embarrassing position we shall be placed.

England alone has protested, of all the nations. To England alone does Mr. Taft ask that the courts be opened. Before we take such a humiliating step let the treaty itself be terminated. Treaties have been terminated before. Mr. Taft himself terminated one with Russia this Spring. And no country has more eagerly swept treaties aside than England, whenever her own interests were involved.

Negotiations for the termination of the treaty would far better become Mr. Taft than an attempt to "preserve the national honor" BY HAULING DOWN THE AMERICAN FLAG OVER THE CANAL AT THE DEMAND OF A SINGLE FOREIGN POWER.

General William Booth Is Dead; He Has Not Lived in Vain

The man, who put his arm around his fallen brother and said, "Keep up your courage, I'll help you," is dead.

General William Booth lived for one purpose. He never gave up getting the good out of every man. He went after the "down and out"; he broke through the conventional ways of getting the sinful; he got his man; he threw his arms around him and said:

"Brother, come with me and I will do you good."

The downcast, the sinful, the despised, the rejected, the poor, the lonely, found in him their friend.

He changed the conventional methods of helping the fallen. Methods did not mean much to him. He wanted results. He was unceasing in his efforts to set the erring right. He established places throughout the world where the man who wanted to help himself found an opportunity.

Many thousands saw hope through his methods. They rejoice in the way that he made them find the light of better days.

Nothing was too bad for him to touch. He went to the hovels and dens of iniquity with his message.

Drums were beaten on the streets and stirring songs were sung. Some criticized the method; others paused and watched. They saw men and women come to themselves.

General Booth did not care for criticism. He was after the fallen. That absorbed his time, his energy and his thought.

He came to Boston and stood up in Park Street Church. He said: "Sin is dirt."

That is all he preached about. Every listener found his meaning at once. He wanted men and women to get out of the mire and dirt. He cleansed them with his message.

That is the man we honor—a human being breaking away from conventional ways, going out to help humanity. What others said were "no good," he cleaned up, brushed and sent back again in the world changed beings. For this, the world rises up today and calls him blessed.

He came to make everyone that had lost his courage feel that he had something more to live for.

General William Booth has not lived in vain.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox -ON- The Failure of Women to Be the Best Mothers Possible

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal Examiner

"IF the parents of a rough diamond could only realize the handicap they place on their child by starting him out into the world without polishing him as much as possible, I am sure every parent would do his utmost to add a touch here and a touch there to the personality of his offspring during childhood, for it is during childhood that the little habits are formed, which, taken as a whole, do so much to influence his future career and station in life. I refer to habits of tidiness, manner, deportment, carriage, table etiquette, care of the toilet, etc. There comes a time in the life of every child when habits of this class have to be formed, and there is no reason on earth why they should not be formed in such a way that in later years they will not be a source of embarrassment to him."

HERBERT A. PARKYN, M. D.

I WISH these words, by one of America's most gifted and distinguished physicians and metaphysicians, could be written in letters of gold and hung where every mother and teacher in the land might read them daily.

Women are pushing forward their claims for higher recognition, everywhere and every day; and women are succeeding in almost all the arts, professions and trades formerly pursued by men exclusively; yet women ARE ALMOST UNIVERSALLY FAILING TO BE THE BEST MOTHERS POSSIBLE.

You who read these words may take exception to such a statement. Yet, employ your leisure hours the next week in looking about you critically and dispassionately for a really perfect, or even "near perfect" mother of boys and girls of that embryo age, from eight to fourteen.

From 8 to 14, Children Show Their Mothers' Teaching

It is during that period children show forth the training and teaching which has come to them, from close association with their mothers.

To quote again from Dr. Parkyn:

"There are great possibilities in a new wooden barrel, provided it is empty. It is very easy to fill it with syrup or kerosene, or any other liquid. But if a barrel be filled first with kerosene it is very difficult to so completely get rid of its impressions on the barrel that the barrel can be used afterward for syrup, the barrel, as it were, having formed an auto-suggestion which is hard to overcome.

"A young child's mind is very much like a barrel, so far as its first impressions are concerned. Its mind is an empty thing, waiting to be filled with any kind of impressions, and the impressions of childhood are by far the most lasting.

Habits Can Be Developed Best During Childhood

"Childhood is the most favorable time to develop the little habits we carry through life, and the importance of giving attention to these little habits cannot be too strongly impressed upon the minds of parents of young children. So many parents believe that if they teach their children what is right and wrong, from a moral and ethical point of view, clothe them and send them to school, they have done all that is required of them, and that the children will do the rest themselves and make a success in life."

Mothers of culture and education are to be found all about us who have allowed their little sons to pass through the formative period of childhood without one distinguishing trait or habit of refined, considerate manhood, and who consider the brusqueness and boorish deportment of their offspring as natural phases of boyhood, which will be eventually outgrown. In America, children are allowed to occupy an unnatural position in the home, and are permitted to demand favors of their elders, where foreign children gently request; to dispute, and flatly contradict, where others would only question or remain silent, and to sit in the presence of their parents and grandparents without waiting for permission or observing whether any one is discommoded by their conduct.

Mothers permit their little sons to interrupt conversation; to enter a room noisily, without removing their hats; to be first at the table, without showing the courtesy of seating the mother or sister or guest, and to air their ideas and opinions aggressively in the presence of older people.

The very greatest work a woman can do on earth is to guide and train the mind and manners of a little child into gentleness, kindliness, courtesy, consideration, politeness, respect and reverence for whatever is great and good, and to teach the embryo man or woman those small refinements of deportment, which mean so much in life. No matter what other work a mother may be doing in the world, if she is neglecting this work, which is the work God has given her, she is miserably failing as an individual and a citizen, as well as a mother.

Not One Woman in 100 Is a Scientific Mother

However bright a boy may be in his lessons, however he may excel in the athletic field, he is not growing into admirable and excellent manhood unless he is receiving the delicate and gracious touches of education which a mother should consider it her great privilege to give. But this cannot be given in a day or a year. It must be done day by day and year by year, unobtrusively and tactfully, until the child has absorbed the wholesome and refining system unconsciously. And we do not find one American mother in one hundred who is unselfish and patient enough to bestow so much time and thought on the profession of scientific motherhood.

THE EXILE

By ENID DAUNCEY

GLORIES of gem-bright isles and waving palms
Leave my heart cold beneath this ardent sun;
I long, dear land of home, for sober charms,
Wearied till my long banishment be done.

I see thy pastures, fringed with noble trees,
Old farms, trim villages, familiar towns.
Oh, for the freshness of the Spring, the breeze,
The golden gorse upon the open downs!

Oh, for loved faces and the haunting sound
Of voices in those dim lands, far away;
Time-honored jest, the old life's daily round—
Ah, God! Could we forget, but for a day!
